This is the most magnificent home we've ever seen.

Mother Nature has children, yet it is our responsibility to protect them. They have voices, yet we must speak for them. They have rights, yet we must fight for them. And they have a home, yet it is we who must shelter them. James V. Zizzi takes a very firm yet simple stand on environmental issues as they affect the building industry on Long Island. "If you don't like an environmental law, work to have it changed. Until then I follow it to the letter."

Some builders bend the environmental rules on behalf of their clients, especially if no one's looking. James V. Zizzi chooses to never look the other way, on behalf of us all.

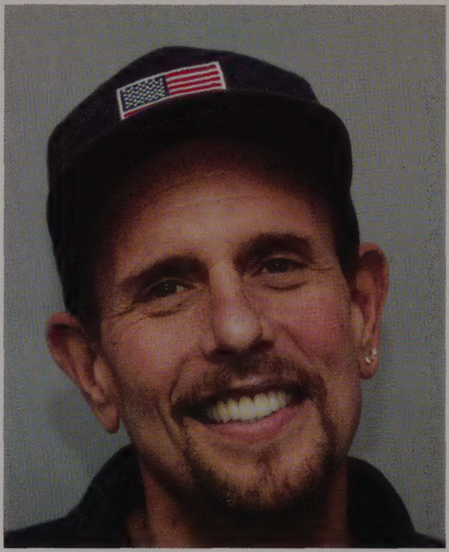
Dreams Do Come True.....



...just ask our patients!

"I never dreamed it could look so good. People look at my teeth and become self-conscience of their own." R.K.

"You are truly an artist, in every sense of the word. I am most grateful for your gentleness and caring and the way you included me in every step of the process. Never once did I feel like just "another patient." Your practice is unlike any other dentist's office I've ever encountered." P.F.

My lifelong dream was always to have a beautiful bright smile. Now I can't seem to get the smile off my face. I believe that there is always a reason why people enter your life and I think you entering my life was to teach me to smile and feel confident, which you achieved with flying colors.Thank you for changing my life forever." C.P.

"Sly Fox" Broadway Matinee
Wed., May. 26th $155 pp.

"Gold is God with an 'L,'" is the motto of Foxwell J. Sly, a miserly con man in Gold Rush-era San Francisco. Greed is good (or at least funny) in Larry Gelbart's classic comedy, starring Richard Dreyfuss and directed by Arthur Penn. Cast includes Bob Dishy, Bronson Pinchot, Eric Stoltz, Rachel York, Elizabeth Berkley and others. Package includes orchestra seats at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, lunch at Rosie O'Grady's and deluxe round-trip transportation.

World Yacht Dinner Cruise

Wed., July 7th $100 pp.

Enjoy a 3-hour voyage of enchantment. Indulge in sumptuous cuisine, dance to delightful music and enjoy gracious and attentive service against the dramatic, ever-changing panorama of the world's premier skyline. Package includes a four-course dinner, dancing and a lot of fun with deluxe round-trip transportation.

Atlantic City Overnight Trip

Tues., June 1st-
Wed., June 2nd
$101 pp., dbl. occ.

Get lucky in Atlantic City!!! This trip includes your overnight stay at the Tropicana Casino & Resort Hotel, $10 in coins, dinner buffet, room, revue show (if available), tax and first class round-trip transportation.

Harlem Tour

Tues., July 13th $80 pp.

The Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture will be one of the enriching stops on this tour with additional visits to several historic districts such as Astor Row, the famous Striver's Row, the main "drag" of 125th Street, world-famed Apollo Theatre, the CAV Building, Duke Ellington Statue & Circle and much more. At the end of the tour, enjoy a sumptuous soul food buffet at Miss Mamie's Spoonbread Too Restaurant. Package includes admission to The Schomburg Center, guided tour, buffet lunch and round-trip transportation.

3-Day Tour
Boston Pops

Sat., June 5th-
Mon., June 7th
$455 pp., dbl. occ.

Enjoy a great 3-day, 2-night tour to one of America's most historic cultural cities. Package includes 2-night deluxe hotel accommodations, taxes, baggage handling; 2-full breakfasts, 1 lunch cruise, 1 dinner, all admissions as stated in the itinerary, including the Boston Pops and guide services. Please call for itinerary.

3-Day Tour
Lancaster/Longwood Garden

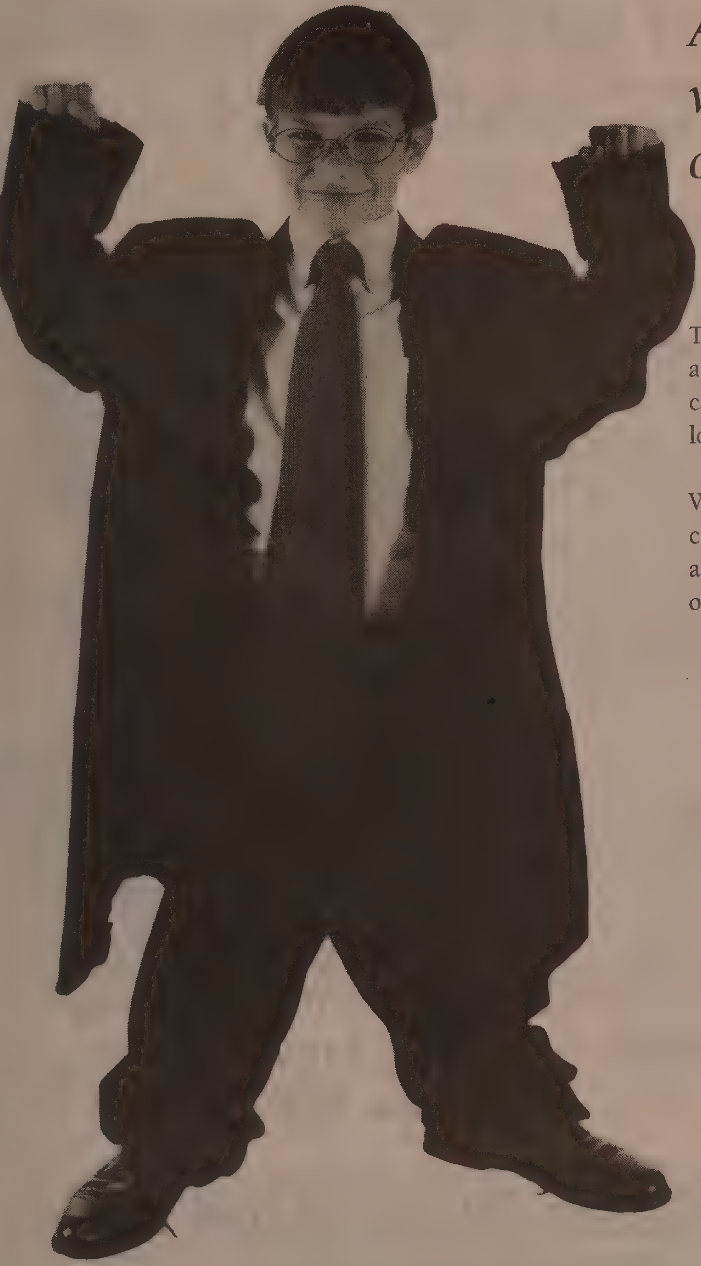
Looking for a mortgage to suit your needs?



At The New York Mortgage Company, we deliver personalized service with one person in mind . . . You.

These days, it seems that most mortgage lenders are simply not willing to tailor a loan specifically for borrowers with unique needs. As a direct lender, NYMC can be as versatile as you need us to be, providing hundreds of highly flexible loan products and innovative programs designed to accommodate your needs.

What's more, we make the entire loan process easier, quicker and more convenient by eliminating the red tape and bureaucratic obstacles that are often associated with borrowing from a large bank. Among the many different kinds of loans you can choose from at NYMC are:

- Interest Only Loans
- Bridge Loans
- Refinance Loans
- Jumbo Loans
- Construction Loans
- True No Doc Loans

and a wide range of others.

We also offer the best available rates, with fast approvals.

ARM APRs may increase after consummation. Offer subject to credit approval.
Advertised rates are prevailing and are subject to change without notice.

Contact NYMC today, and discover why when it comes to your mortgage, we take things personally.

The Local Weather

The Exact Day by Day Weather Between July 4th and Labor Day

By Dan Rattiner

People pay a lot of money to come out here every weekend in the summertime. And so they have a right to know what, for each of those ten weekends, they should expect as far as weather is concerned. Therefore, as a public service, Dan's Papers hereby tells you. (It doesn't cost so much to be here for between Memorial Day and July 4. So we do not offer this free public service for that period.)

July 2-4. Friday night will be very cool for this time of year, with temperatures in the high fifties. The fireworks at the Southampton Fresh Air Home for the Fresh Air Fund go off on schedule. By Saturday morning, most people won't know what to wear, because a fog will have rolled in and the temperature will actually drop to the high forties. Most people will cautiously decide on the layered look, starting with short sleeves, then putting long sleeves and sweaters on before they go out after breakfast. Who knows what will happen? By noon, the fog will disappear, revealing a beautiful day, and the temperature will shoot up to the low nineties. By 3 p.m. the entire East End will be littered with slightly used, very expensive clothing left on chairs and in restaurants. Most of which will be picked up by six, when the temperature will once again plummet into the fifties. Sunday, most everybody will just hang around the house — to be close to the clothes closets. The evening fireworks at the beach will be very lightly attended, and just at 9 p.m., as the first firecracker is shot off, the fog will once again roll in off the ocean, resulting in the rest of the fireworks appearing as a disappointing series of muffled thumps and flashes. Strawberry picking ends this weekend.

Black carpenter ants. Gypsy moths. Bees. Muskrats. Bats. Mosquitos. Deer. Fleas. Algae (the red tide). Aphids. Hornets. Flying monkeys. Cougars.

July 9-11. There will be a cold rain all day Friday and there will be many arguments among family members in Manhattan about whether it is worth it to come out to the Hamptons at all. On the six o'clock news, weather forecasters will happily predict that the rain, heavy at times, will end by midnight, with Saturday and Sunday being sunny days with clear skies and temperatures in the high seventies and quite pleasant. So everyone on Friday night will pack up and come out, creating one of the South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Henry Schleiff of Bridgehampton, Court TV's CEO/Chairman, arranged for his friend, Henry Silverman, head of Cendant, to do a walk-on next season on Silverman's favorite TV show, "Law & Order." Schleiff also got for Silverman the "Law & Order" script, autographed by the cast, from his friend, Dick Wolf, who owns the popular TV show.

International lawyer Michael J. Griffith of Amagansett was mistaken for Richard Gere when he dined at Gordon's the other day. Griffith says the owner of that eatery has "the biggest name in the restaurant business: George Polychronopoulos. Do you know a longer name?"

Ruth Bowen, who's been Aretha Franklin's agent for 43 years, and real estate mogul Billy Bryant, who have a home in Quogue, have been secretly married for several weeks. They were just feted by their friend, Page Morton Black, chairman of the Parkinson's Disease Foundation, for which they do pro bono fundraising.

Howard Stern of Amagansett has seen his ratings rise 22% in the New York market since Clear Channel's decision to drop his show on six stations in February. "… the most important political voice on talk radio this year may turn out to be not [Al] Franken but the usually apolitical 'shock jock' Howard Stern," according to Ross Douthat in the June issue of The Atlantic.

largest traffic jams in the history of the East End.

But it will all be for naught. On Saturday morning, the rain will turn into a torrential downpour, sometimes accompanied by thunder and lightning, and at one point during the early afternoon even accompanied by hailstones the size of baseballs. On Sunday afternoon, as the downpour continues, news investigators will discover an incriminating email proving the forecast of sunny and clear came about from a bribe passed by a Hampton Merchant's Association to a scientist at the weather center in Atlanta. By Monday, three people will have been arrested. Tomatoes are ripe for picking beginning this weekend. The Music Festival of the Hamptons begins this weekend in Sayre Park in Bridgehampton.

July 16-18. The coldest beginning of the season in memory will end this weekend. On Friday night, the temperature will soar above a hundred, and by Saturday at 3 p.m. it will have reached a record one hundred and six. Skies will be clear. There will be no wind. What will have made matters even worse is that at 11 a.m. Saturday morning, as the thermometers pass eighty five, two hundred thousand people all at the same time on the East End will turn on their air conditioners for the first time. Within minutes, all power from Patchogue to Montauk will be knocked out. Most everybody will spend the rest of the day in the pool. The scheduled Rell Sunn Surfing Competition scheduled for Ditch Plains in Montauk will go on, however.

By Sunday morning, power will be restored. Sunday brunches, cancelled earlier, will hurriedly be back on. By noon, skies will become overcast and the temperature will drop into the high seventies. It will be a very pleasant afternoon, really the first one since the season began. Many people will call in to their co-workers to say they intend to take Monday off. They are delayed.

Monday, however, will be taken up getting air conditioning units checked and repaired. Having all been turned on the day before and then suddenly stopped, a great many of them are now emitting a metallic odor which repair men tell them can only be fixed by "doing a full summer refurbishment."

So even though the weather is in the low eighties on Monday, everybody stays home, afraid to turn their air conditioners on, to wait for the repairman to come. Corn is in season.

July 23-25. A beautiful weekend. Clear skies. The Orchid Ball under the tent at Villa Maria in Water Mill will be a big success. However, back at the big summer homes, both inside and out, all sorts of little creatures hatch, are born and begin to attack. There are infestations everywhere. Black carpenter ants. Gypsy moths. Bees. Muskrats. Bats. Mosquitos. Deer. Fleas. Algae (the red tide). Aphids. Hornets. Flying monkeys. Cougars. The pest removal people are out in full force.

Also this weekend, there are stories about the beginning of the hurricane season, which is in three weeks. Be sure to stock up with

Joys Of Sex

A Couple Of Hamptonites Bring A Show To The Great White Way

By Dan Rattiner

Ever wonder how a Broadway show, or an off-Broadway show goes from idea to opening night? Standing out in front of the Variety Arts Theatre on Third Avenue and 14th Street in New York City on the opening night of a new musical comed, I thought about it. The photographers were there. The critics were there. The producers of the show, a lot of them, were there with their families and friends. Also there were the family and friends of all the actors and actresses plus regular playgoers and others who like to attend opening nights or who had seen the ads in the New York Times and were intrigued by this show, The Joys Of Sex, and just wanted to come see what it was all about. Florists arrived delivering flowers to various participants. A white stretch limousine sat parked by the curb.

I do not know David Weinstein, who wrote the music and co-wrote the book. But I do know, very well, Melissa Levis, a New Yorker and Hamptonite, who five years ago thought up the idea for this show, wrote some songs for it, then re-wrote those songs, found David Weinstein to collaborate with on the book and music, and has shepherded this whole thing from start to, well, perhaps the beginning of a long, long run. She was holding a bouquet of flowers that was almost as big as she was. She peered from behind it.

"I don't know who sent this to me," she said gleefully. "Must be a secret admirer. Or a fan."

I met Melissa Levis in 1995 because she called me up and asked me to be a singer in this new rock band she was forming.

"It's called Melissa and the Moguls," she said. "It has in it four Hampton Moguls. We want you to be the fifth. You run a newspaper."

I explained I did play some instruments but none of them well enough to be in a rock band and she said that's okay, nobody else plays well enough, either. We would all be backup people, playing the maracas or the bongos or the harmonica, or in the case of Jonathan Farkas, a member of the New York City department store family, the guitar to the lead singer, her.

"We're having our next rehearsal at Jonathan's house," she said. She had a great singer's voice. I could hear it over the phone.

I told her I would play kazoo.

Over the next two years during the summer, we held rehearsals or performances at Jonathan Farkas' house in Mecox, at Andy Sabin's house in Amagansett, at Pat Malloy's house in North Haven, and at Allan Frank's house, also in Amagansett. Sabin is in recycled metals, Allan Frank is in textiles, and Pat Malloy owns a good bit of Sag Harbor. He's also an accomplished yachtsman. Our performances were in the Stephen Talkhouse in Amagansett — I believe we had three shows — and we also made a CD there, at which time we were joined by comedian Robert Klein.

We sang songs, all written by Melissa Levis, with titles such as "Ooh la la Hamptons," "My House is Bigger than Yours," and "A List." After it was over, Melissa sent me a framed copy of the CD, spray painted gold (as in a million sales), which I believe she sent also to all the other Moguls. I have mine right on the wall by my front door. You can't miss my album, gone gold, as soon as you come in. And there I am, sitting beside a sports car with all the other Moguls, in a photograph taken in front of Marty Richard's house in Southampton. As a result of this, we all became — there is no other word for this — special friends with one another, and we remain so to this day.

Melissa was raised in Vermont and graduated Brown University, then got an MFA in Musical Theatre Writing from NYU. She is vivacious, irrepressible (she got me to agree to be one of her Moguls), funny and full of ideas.

Four years ago, she married Ben Singer, a Senior Director with the Ackman-Ziff Real Estate Group, and right in the middle of putting The Joys Of Sex together, which began to get serious about a year ago, she got pregnant. It would be her first child.

"I'm holding off telling anybody about this," she told me. "If prospective investors knew about this, it might scare them off. Maybe they'd think I'll quit."

There is no quit in Melissa Levis. Melissa, who had never put together a show before, started by sending CDs of the songs for the show out to prospective investors (who are also given the title of "producers"). A share was $20,000. She wanted to raise a million dollars, but she'd be able to go ahead if she could get $500,000.

I listened to the sample CD, but I took a pass. For one thing, I am in the middle of remodeling my house. For another, as advertised, she'd sent me a whole series of songs that were very similar to songs in Melissa and the Moguls, except they were about sex. Tasteful sex. Cutsie, slightly embarrassing sex. As she explained it to me, the songs would be presented, without plot, in a sort of variety show fashion. I didn't think this would fly. Also, I had never invested in a Broadway show, but I had heard the rumors. 99 shows in 100 lose money. The last one makes a profit but those in control of the money make it go to new expenses. The producers (investors) get good seats, get to meet the actors, and except for one case in a thousand, never make out financially. They get to say they are financing the arts, which they are. Anyway, those are the rumors.

Melissa took my decision gracefully, but she also took it in stride. Did I know anyone else in the theatre? (I did.) Could they come to a producer's preview? (They did.)

And the money started coming in. Melissa informed me of it every step of the way. They were at $200,000. There would be another preview. Perhaps I could come. Now the show had a plot. And a cast of 11. But they could afford only four actors. They would find four actors who could play eleven characters. Now there was another backer's audition. They were at $450,000. They were going to make it.

"It's on a Tuesday night on Park in the Eighties." I close the newspaper on Tuesday nights.

Melissa, who had now partnered with Weinstein, an experienced arranger and composer for film (The Mailman, A Boy and a Girl, Sex Farce), now went looking for a choreographer, a set designer, a costume designer, a theatre, a public relations firm.

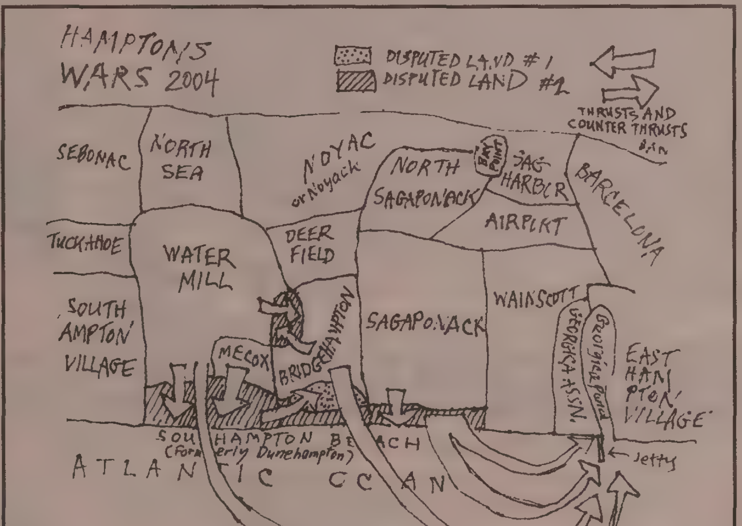
Non-Existent Villages Battle With One Another Over Borderlines

By Dan Rattiner

You've probably heard of fantasy baseball. A group of people make up some baseball teams. And then they "hire" real life players for these non-existent teams and play them against one another. No bat hits a baseball anywhere. But for a considerable period of time, the group is caught up in who's winning and who's losing various make-believe games, and in the end somebody wins the "pennant."

Fantasy baseball is similar to what is going on in the Town of Southampton these days. Southampton is real. But the various entities that are battling to win in that town are not. They include Dunehampton, Southampton Beach, Sagaponack, Bridgehampton and Water Mill. The last three you have probably heard of. But from a legal perspective they do not exist. They are merely sections of Southampton town, as are, say Tuckahoe or North Sea or Squiretown. As for the other two, Dunehampton and Southampton Beach, they are not real, either. They have, in fact, no basis in reality other than that they have been thought up in somebody's mind.

The announced goal for at least four of these five non-existent entities is to become an official Village. It seems that just one, or perhaps two might succeed in the end. If that happens, it would be like the wooden puppet Pinocchio in the end, turning into a real boy.



Well, there has been a lot of shoving and jostling among the participants. First out of the box were some people who wanted to form a village they would call Dunehampton that would essentially shear off the southern third of the communities of Sagaponack, Bridgehampton and Water Mill, the oceanfront third, and extend along the ocean from the East Hampton Town Line to the Southampton Village Town Line six miles away. In places it would only be a few hundred yards wide. It was intended as an exclusive oceanfront enclave and the boundary farthest from the beach zigged this way and that way as it included some people but excluded others. It seemed to involve "who you know."

Dunehampton flopped. To become a legal village, you need to show that you have 500 legal residents. To accomplish this, some of the proponents counted people who were dead, people who worked in the village, people who accidentally wandered in and people who were relatives of those that lived in the village. The matter was appealed after it was rejected — the appeal being led by a man with an oceanfront home who had listed 30 residents in his house — and the appeal was lost and now there is a further appeal.

Next were some people who got together and announced they would form a Village of Sagaponack. Some of the land that would be included in this village, if it were to succeed, had formerly been part of the application of Dunehampton. They weren't about to have their beach access sheared off.

Sagaponack lurched forward, but ran into the collapsing Dunehampton bid. Dunehampton would have to fully collapse before the Sagaponack bid could go ahead. But Sagaponack would be next in line.

The next group that threw its hat in the ring were people who wanted to form the Village of Bridgehampton. They declared that years ago Bridgehampton had been gerrymandered out of a big slice of property on their western border that was instead listed as part of the Water Mill School District. Bridgehampton proponents drew borders lopping off this piece of Water Mill school section and returned it to its rightful owner. This resulted in a squawk from a group called the Water Mill Advisory Board.

The Bridgehampton people also noted that THEIR village, if approved, would be a dagger through the heart of the Dunehampton proposal, because Bridgehampton, in reclaiming its waterfront, would cut this long oceanfront snake of land called Dunehampton in two. That would be that. Lawyers warned Bridgehampton, however, that they, like Sagaponack, would have to wait.

The latest news this week is that the former proponents of Dunehampton, in an apparent acknowledgement of the impending defunctness of that application, have put together a completely new proposal, renamed Southampton Beach, and in a lightning thrust, have put in their application, unchallenged, to muscle themselves in front of Sagaponack and Bridgehampton for consideration. Southampton Beach would cover the same ground as Dunehampton, but because Dunehampton may NEVER have enough people in it to succeed, the new entity would also cover a further strip inland that would make up the difference, much of it carved out of an even bigger piece of southern Bridgehampton.

"We've incorporated a couple of people's properties who wanted to join and an area in Bridgehampton," a lawyer for Southampton Beach told a local reporter.

"Benedict Arnolds," said a Bridgehampton resident about the apparent defection. Thus would be created Southampton Beach.

But Southampton Beach doesn't want a fight with Sagaponack and Bridgehampton. It wants to win them over.

"We are calling for a four village compact," said a Mr. Baker, speaking for the new proposed Southampton Beach. "We want Sagaponack, Bridgehampton and Water Mill to join with us in a 'four village' council. The four would enter into a 'treaty' that would, among other things 'reaffirm the public's right to access the beaches' within the perimeters of the incorporation. This is the right group to protect the beaches."

Meaning — they, as the "public," could use the beaches and everybody else could be kept out.

He also suggested that, as a coalition, they could mount a powerful attack against the adjacent Village of East Hampton — a real village — to get them to remove a jetty built at Georgica Pond that is negatively affecting the sand on the beach at Sagaponack, er, Southampton Beach, to the west.

At this point, it's been a lawyer's paradise.

The Raid

Illegal Aliens, Social Security Cards, Driver's Licenses, Passports And Workers

By Dan Rattiner

The war against illegal aliens flared up briefly last week when authorities conducted a four pronged attack, one in Southampton out in front of the 7-Eleven, one on Main Street in Amagansett, another on Lincoln Road in Montauk and the last on West Main Street in Riverhead. The operation was conducted by the Southampton Village Police, the Department of Motor Vehicles, the Suffolk County Police detective squad, the Economic Crime Bureau, the United States Treasury Department, the Social Security Administration, the United States Attorney's Office, the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office, the Southampton Village Mayor's Office and the State of New York. Arrests were made. People are in jail. But as in previous attacks, when one illegal alien falls, three others come to take their place. The war continues.

Police arrested three people in these two raids, and a third raid on a private home on Lincoln Road in Montauk.

The enemy are people who have come to America from foreign countries because there are jobs here and, if they work very hard, they are able to send some of the money they make home to help their families. In the past, waves and waves of immigrants came here. An estimated 98% of us did not come over on the Mayflower. And an estimated 30% of us have grandparents and great grandparents who started out here as illegals. It's an ongoing problem.

The current war, aimed mostly at the Hispanics, Vietnamese, Poles, Ukranians and Russians who have come here illegally, took a dramatic turn two months ago when New York State passed a law making it illegal to get a driver's license or car registration unless you have a social security card or a passport. This strikes at the very heart of the illegal alien problem, because without a car, aliens cannot get to and from work. And without work, they cannot make the money they want to send to their families back home.

The Southampton operation began last Saturday morning, when the police blocked off sections of North Sea Road where it runs in front of the 7-Eleven. Illegal aliens had been congregating in front of the 7-Eleven on the street corner there every morning, as they do in several places through the heat of summer and bitter cold of winter, to indicate that they are available for work. But neighbors said that on this particular corner, the illegals and the people picking them up were causing a traffic tie-up in the mornings. So to stop it, the police arrived at 7:30 a.m., put down orange traffic cones to block traffic and began asking every motorist who slowed down to look over the prospective workers to stop and produce licenses and registrations. During the one and a half hour operation, which blocked even more traffic, three people, all of whom were identified as Latinos, were arrested for not having driver's licenses and were taken downtown. There, they were made to pay $50 each and were released. The "routine operation," as it was described, was declared a success.

In Riverhead and Amagansett, agents from the Economic Crime Bureau of the District Attorney's office used search warrants to raid two stores with the same name — Sterling Enterprises — which advertise in their windows, in Spanish, that they can provide help to Hispanics in filling out paperwork. Both stores have been in business for more than two years.

Police arrested three people in these two raids, and a third raid on a private home on Lincoln Road in Montauk, and charged these three with selling false passports, social security cards and driver's licenses. One person, a 28-year-old Hispanic woman named Elizabeth Alarcon, was arrested for forgery; an Ecuadorian citizen named John Ponzo was arrested for being an interpreter, income tax preparer and bookkeeper for Sterling; and George Sterling, 66, owner of Sterling Enterprises, was arrested for selling forged documents. Among the items seized were notary stamps, I.N.S. stamps and papers, forged passports, tax returns, New York State photo identification cards, Immigration and Naturalization Service seals and various pens, ink and papers. Alarcon, who is an illegal alien, is being held in lieu of $100,000. Ponzo is being held on $25,000 bail and George Sterling was released after posting $25,000 bail. All are to appear shortly in Riverhead for arraignment before Justice Richard Ehlers.

District Attorney Thomas J. Spota said the operation was a success and surely put a dent in alien operations, but he failed to respond when asked by reporters if, since some of the illegal documents might have been purchased by Pakistanis, the United States Homeland Security Service was involved in the operation.

Untold thousands of dollars in legal fees have been spent so far to deal with all this nothing.

For awhile there, with Dunehampton dying, there were those that suggested that maybe everybody just ought to stand down. All these incorporations would just add unnecessary layers of government at great expense. We'd done just fine up until now without them. But then there were those who argued that once burned shame on you, twice burned shame on me. At least one of these other Village proposals, Bridgehampton or Sagaponack, or maybe Water Mill or Mecox, will have to go ahead to block any future effort from the Dunehamptonites.

Oh, I forgot about Mecox. So small. Would just be overrun. Not even let out a peep.

And while they argued, the same Dunehampton gang came through with a fully notarized Southampton Beach application. Burned twice, shame on me.

Whole countries have been created over not much less. And as Yogi Berra once said about fantasy baseball, it ain't over until it's over.

In researching this article, I came upon the following exchange between a Southampton Town Councilman named Dennis Suskind and two residents of that town, Katherine McGovern and Ann Tracy, who live in a section called Bay Point. This was at a public meeting two weeks ago, where they were discussing the future of another section of Southampton called Noyac. (Noyac's southern border abuts Water Mill). Bay Point was being lumped in with Noyac.

KATHERINE MCGOVERN : I do not live in Noyac. I live in Bay Point. And that's the way I want it to stay.

DENNIS SUSKIND: What is your situation in Bay Point? You think Bay Point is an independent area, hamlet, or what?

ANN TRACY: The Bay Point area has 220 houses. That, to me, represents its own hamlet. But we don't want to be a hamlet. We want to be ourselves.

DENNIS SUSKIND: What is "ourselves?" You need a scorecard.

Renters Beware

Is the Internet Aiding Share Houses or Aiding The Crackdowns?

By Anthony Vela

Trying to find a good place to live on the East End at a reasonable price is like trying to find buried treasure, but renting illegal "share houses" or what some call "grouper homes" is against the law, bad for the surrounding community, and a danger to tenants. However, share houses have been all over the East End for decades and they do not seem to be going anywhere anytime soon. Share houses can either be dilapidated houses with dirt floors and people sleeping in closets or a few feet apart on mattresses, or exclusive homes built for the wealthy, advertised on Internet web sites and through local newspapers.

Last September, two illegal share houses were raided in Springs by the East Hampton Town Police and code enforcement officers who discovered living quarters for up to 14 people. The two owners of those share houses were fined $19,000 and forced to repay the town on a loan for home repairs.

> Seasonal rentals are required to get permits to operate, but if a house is full of relatives, they can have as many as they want to.

Share houses are easy to find on the Internet — after less than five minutes of searching, the web site www.summersharehouse.com came up. On their home page were advertisements for several "share house parties." Their third of the season was held in New York City on May 13, 2004. For a $10 cover charge, you could attend the event, and for $50, you could reserve a table to show pictures of your share house — they even throw in a complimentary drink. However, for $99 you can list your house with three pictures and email links on their web site, which they say gets over 10,000 hits a day. You can also find message boards on the Internet where people can get up-to-date information on the best share houses, people looking to rent together, and where to find them.

Looking through the summer share house web site, we found a house in East Hampton that sleeps 15 (not counting two extra beds), one in Southampton with eight bedrooms and eight private bathrooms, and one in Amagansett that sleeps up to fifteen. Also advertised were share houses in seven other East End locations, including one in Westhampton Beach, plus over a dozen places throughout Fire Island. Another share house advertised in East Hampton costs $2,600 per weekend and comes with a Jacuzzi, heated pool (1,300 sq. ft.), tennis court/basketball hoop, a dining room that seats 16, 6 bedrooms that sleep 15, laundry, maid service, and many other amenities. If this is not blatant violation of town code, then what is?

However, to be fair, we spoke with Southampton and East Hampton town officials to see what they think and what they are currently doing to stop illegal share houses. According to Southampton Public Safety Administrator Sheryl Kraft, it is not illegal to list advertisements for share houses in newspapers and on web sites, but it is illegal to rent them in the Town of Southampton. When she was told that share house parties were taking place, Kraft said "they have been having "share house parties" for the twenty years that I've been here. They now use web sites as another form of advertising."

You would think that the police and code enforcement officers would be waiting at the front doors of the share houses advertised on the web sites but Kraft says that it is not that easy. In order to raid a share house, a thorough investigation is required. "You just can't go and remove people without a proper investigation. They have rights. There have been several cases in the last year where we asked a judge to order them to cease from renting, and we've been pretty lucky," says Kraft. "We've found people sleeping right next to water heaters in basements without adequate windows, no natural light and without the proper ventilation."

When they can, Southampton town officials mail letters to those share houses advertised telling them that share houses are illegal and informing them of town laws. Kraft understands how people can become frustrated when they complain and it seems like nothing is being done, but she says they are doing the best they can.

Seasonal rentals are required to get permits to operate, but if a house is full of relatives, they can have as many as they want to. Kraft says this loophole in the law gives people a way to get around the town code. Kraft knows this and says that some stories claiming that they are not doing their research are wrong. "Some stories say that we do not do our research, but we do."

Kraft says that the town board can change the law to make it easier for town code enforcement to do their job but that are bound by New York State penal law. With landlords making tens of thousands of dollars per season per share house, towns could increase fines to the point where it adversely affects running share houses.

East Hampton Town Supervisor Bill McGintee said that he is aware of the advertisements on the Internet and in local papers, and "share house parties" in Manhattan. "We pay attention to the Internet advertisements but we have no jurisdiction on stopping share house meetings in Manhattan," says McGintee.

According to McGintee, code enforcement officers monitor web sites and are using it as another tool in investigating alleged complaints. Code Enforcement gathers information from various sources and the more information they gather, the more likely they will be able to get search warrants and eventually prosecute the case. McGintee has also revamped the Code Enforcement office and offered a training course in investigative techniques.

"We've given three weeks of investigative techniques training to all departments responsible for investigating. We've also hired a new head of Code Enforcement, added two new officers, and are using a flexible work schedule on an experimental basis," says McGintee.

East Hampton Town Attorney Tiffany Scarlato says that lack of affordable housing is the major culprit of the year-round share houses in East Hampton, and that most of them are not advertised. She says a landlord can make $1,800 per family, or $600-$800 per person per month. However, to help rid the town of share housing, fines for first time offenders have risen to $1,000 per day. Scarlato echoes McGintee, saying that the Internet is another tool to fight illegal renting.

"They monitor the web sites and other sources and cross-reference them to determine where the house is and go and monitor the house," says Scarlato who says she has even seen share house advertisements nailed to telephone poles.

If people want to rent homes, they should get renters permits and follow town code by the book. However, as long as affordable housing remains an issue and people are willing to break the law, share houses will continue to be in business on the East End.

Paul Simon

Singer, Songwriter

By David Stoll

Paul Simon's career writing and performing songs has spanned six decades. He made his first recording, "Hey, Schoolgirl," at the age of 15 with high school classmate Art Garfunkel (under the names Tom and Jerry) in 1957. In the 1960s, he and Garfunkel were among the top duos in recording history. Following their 1971 breakup, Simon has spent over thirty years writing and performing his own songs, utilizing an amazing breadth of sounds and styles. He also found time to act in Woody Allen's classic movie Annie Hall and has appeared on "Saturday Night Live," both as host and musical guest. More recently, he wrote the score for the Broadway musical Capeman and the Oscar-nominated song "Father and Daughter" for the movie The Wild Thornberrys. He has won a dozen Grammy Awards, including the Grammy's lifetime achievement award; he was a Kennedy Center honoree; and he has been inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. He also has had several hugely successful reunion tours with Garfunkel.

Simon and Garfunkel are on tour this summer, so Simon probably won't be seen much here in the Hamptons. He owns a home on the bluffs in Montauk, where he was married to Edie Brickel. He has performed in the Hamptons many times, including at Southampton College for its All for the Sea benefit, the East Hampton School District soccer field to help local resident Denis Craine in his struggle with Lou Gehrig's disease, the Deep Hollow Ranch to help preserve the Montauk Lighthouse, and occasionally at Stephen Talkhouse in Amagansett just to jam.

Even a tiny selection of Simon's songs is astounding: "The Sound of Silence," "The Boxer," "Scarborough Fair," "Mrs. Robinson," "Bridge Over Troubled Water," "50 Ways to Leave Your Lover," "Still Crazy After All These Years," "Graceland" and "You Can Call Me Al." Simon has said that he hears sounds and rhythms in his mind and enjoys figuring out how to realize those sounds and rhythms through his music. He is excited by the sounds and rhythms of different cultures, which play a prominent role in so much his work. Perhaps most famous is the African-inspired music on the album "Graceland." Many believe "Graceland" to be his finest achievement.

It is not just his music, though, that accounts for the success of Simon's songs. His lyrics range from inspiring to haunting to funny. Consider the simple sweetness of this passage from "Bridge Over Troubled Water," which takes on almost epic proportions when sung by Art Garfunkel:

When you're weary, feeling small,
When tears are in your eyes, I will dry them all;
I'm on your side, when times get rough
And friends just can't be found,
Like a bridge over troubled water
I will lay me down.
Like a bridge over troubled water
I will lay me down.

"The Sound of Silence," one of his earliest works, remains as haunting and true today as it was nearly forty years ago, as this except shows:

And in the naked light I saw
Ten thousand people, maybe more.
People talking without speaking,
People hearing without listening,
People writing songs that voices
never share
And no one dare
Disturb the "The Sound of Silence".
"Fools" said I, "You do not know
Silence like a cancer grows.
Hear my words that I might teach
you,
Take my arms that I might reach
you."
But my words like silent raindrops
fell,
And echoed
In the wells of silence

Simon's sense of humor is on display in many of his songs, most memorably in "50 Ways to Leave Your Lover":

You just slip out the back, Jack
Make a new plan, Stan
You don't need to be coy, Roy
Just get yourself free
Hop on the bus, Gus
You don't need to discuss much
Just drop off the key, Lee
And get yourself free

It is no surprise, then, that Simon has been seen frequently on "Saturday Night Live," not only as a musical guest, but also five times as host. Who can forget his "Silver Bells" sketch with Steve Martin? While Simon sweetly sings "Silver Bells" with complete sincerity, Steve Martin remarks that Christmas is "A time for watching all those happy kids sitting on Santa's lap in Toyland. Thinking to yourself, hmmmmm, maybe I'll be a Santa next year. Twelve years old is not so far from eighteen."

Martin is one of Simon's close friends. When Simon received recognition as a Kennedy Center honoree, it was humorist Martin, not someone from the music industry, who delivered the tribute. Martin began, "It would be easy for me to stand up here for the next few minutes and talk about Paul Simon's consummate skill as a songwriter, but this seems to be neither the time nor the place."

Paul Frederic Simon was born in Newark, New Jersey on October 13, 1941. His family moved to Queens, where he attended Forest Hills High School, where he met Art Garfunkel. Although "Hey Schoolgirl" was a hit, Simon and Garfunkel interrupted their music careers to go to college. Simon graduated from Queens College, and then enrolled at Brooklyn Law School. Fortunately, he dropped out and returned to music in the early 1960s, at first on his own in the United States and France. He then joined up again with Garfunkel, but their album Wednesday Morning, 3AM did not do well — even though it included "The Sound of Silence" — so Simon returned to Europe once again working on his own. There, he recorded a solo album, "The Paul Simon Songbook" (including the song "I Am a Rock"), which likewise, did not achieve great success.

Then, producer Tom Wilson brought Simon and Garfunkel back together, remixed "The Sound of Silence" and issued it as a single. It was a huge hit, and the duo became a sensation. Among their many successes was their contribution to the movie The Graduate; it is difficult to imagine that the film would have become a classic without Simon and Garfunkel's songs. Simon and Garfunkel's breakup stemmed from artistic and personality differences.

Simon has performed and toured with many of music's legends, among them Carol King early on, and, much more recently, another 1960s legend, Bob Dylan. But it is the Simon and Garfunkel reunion tours that generate the most excitement among fans, old and new alike. Well over one half million people attended Simon and Garfunkel's reunion concerts in Central Park in 1981 and 1991. In 2003, they opened the Grammy Awards singing "The Sound of Silence" under a small spot light on a tiny stage. The audience was captivated. That night, Simon and Garfunkel were awarded the lifetime achievement award.

Simon has said that he loves writing and recording and performing. For that we are all lucky. Secretary of State Colin Powell put it perfectly during a White House ceremony before the Kennedy Center Honors: "If there ever was an artist tuned to the infinite rhythms of the human heart, whether those hearts are beating in the boroughs of New York City or the townships of Soweto or the villas of Rio de Janeiro, it is my friend, Paul Simon. Paul, just as it says in the title of one of your most recent albums, "You're the One."

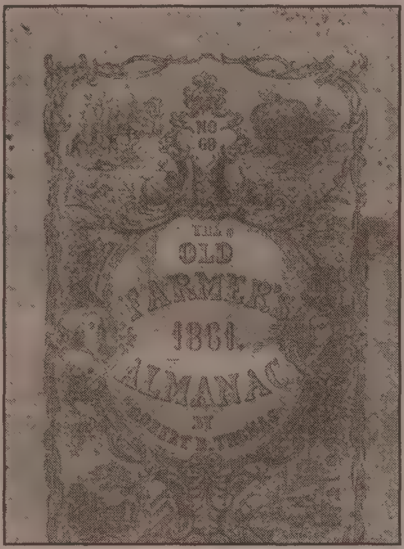
bottled water, flashlights, gasoline, canned food, matches and so forth and so on. In spite of this, on Sunday night, a huge hurricane will come roaring through — seemingly out of nowhere — the eye of which will pass directly over the Shinnecock Canal, so no damage will be done to the land. Oddly, the weather center in Atlanta will refuse to name it, saying they only name hurricanes ahead of time. Furthermore, they allow only one hurricane to one letter of the alphabet and all the letters are accounted for. Roses are in full bloom.



July 30-August 1. Usually, a heavy surf precedes a big storm. But on this weekend, huge waves of ten and fifteen feet thunder ashore on Friday night and the weather people wonder if this is because of the unnamed storm last week, or a precursor of a new storm, named Ratso, expected this week? In any case, on Friday night, people drive the Montauk Highway not through a fog but through a fine mist billowing in off the ocean. They can hear the crash of the surf. What they cannot see or hear are all the surfers — many of them crying for help and screaming in pain as they are taken by the big surf and the sharks.

They died doing what they wanted to do, dude, the surviving surfers say.

On Saturday, the big surf ends, giving way to an eerie silence. A brisk wind springs up. Golfers are about. Sailboats are out, heeling over, in the bays. Red flags go up. No swimming.

Sunday the wind dies down. Now there is a huge high tide, which, coming hard on the big surf, makes breaches in the dunes and seawalls. Ira Rennert in Bridgehampton had planned to move in this weekend, but now the place is flooded and the move in is postponed indefinitely. Adjacent to his fabulous 110,000 square foot house on Peter's Pond Lane, a pond appears. Voila. It's Peter's Pond. Everyone drives back to the city under partly cloudy skies early this Sunday, fearing there is worse to come. It doesn't. The sun comes out. The big gala at the Water Mill Center is held on Saturday, and the Dan's Papers Kite Fly is held on Sunday. Porgies and cod are running.

August 6-8. Early Friday evening on TV, the weather forecasters predict sunny skies with temperatures in the high nineties over the weekend. This is the first weather forecast since the great weather forecasting scandal of July four weeks ago, and all forecasters wear an official Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval medal on their lapels to indicate they have been cleared for accuracy. Indeed, the forecast proves accurate and everywhere on the East End people lie about gasping for air or stay indoors with the air conditioning.

The only exception to this is along the oceanfront, where big surf will again pound the beaches. The tides are extremely high and the whole thing is made more so by the complete collapse of the Rennert mansion in Sagaponack with the attendant washing out to sea of hundreds of thousands of tons of concrete which accounts for three and a half extra feet of high tide from Westhampton Beach to Amagansett.

No other houses, besides Rennert's, are washed away, but this weekend there is an incredible flurry of activity as everybody with oceanfront homes joins up with one or another in newly formed Beach Fortification Committees.

There is the Southampton Beach Fortification Committee, the Westhampton Beach Fortification Committee, the East Hampton Beach Fortification Committee and the Quogue Beach Fortification Committee. None of these committees can find anybody anywhere in government to talk to.

"Do you know any of the critics at the Times?" she asked.

She found Jeremy Dobrish, a director. (Class Mothers of '68, the Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged)), and, with great courage, she booked a theatre. She'd take it for "as long as it goes" she told me.

She organized actor's auditions, with notes in Variety inviting people to try out, and she sat there in the audience with her collaborator and the producer and the director and they hired four excellent actors, two men and two women, all willing and able to play up to three different roles each. They hired Tony-award nominee Ron Bohmer (The Scarlet Pimpernel, title role), David Josefsberg, (Les Miz, Grease!, Winchell), Stephanie Kurtzuba (The Boy from Oz) and Jenelle Lynn Randall (off-Broadway in They Wrote That? and Blackout — Orchid).

"We found a musician who plays a Sinfonia," Melissa told me excitedly one day. "It's an old fashioned instrument, but it sounds like a whole orchestra!" Which meant she wouldn't have to hire a whole orchestra — if the union went along with it, which they did.

For Opening Night, little Monty Singer, now seven months old, was with the sitter, but attending were her father and mother, Dr. Albert and Georgette Levis, who came down from the Inn they own and run in Vermont. Also, of course, Ben Singer, the proud father, producer and, well, husband and companion of Melissa.

"She (Melissa) dedicates this play to Ben and Monty Singer, her true joys of sex," she wrote in the playbill.

We took our seats. The lights dimmed. And this play went on. I can review plays. But I can't review this one. I think it is one of the funniest plays I have ever seen, with a plot that keeps you interested and with songs that are musically brilliant. As for the performers, I cannot say enough about them. They are young, athletic, wonderful actors and great singers. The songs are hilarious. "Intercourse on the Internet," "In the Parlor Be a Lady but in the Bedroom be a..." "The Three Way," "The First Time," "I Need it Bad," "The Vault." The Vault is sung by the 60ish Miami Beach parents of a lead character named Brian Shapiro. And these parents wind up in this Sex Club. Oy vay. But I am prejudiced, I think. And now I wish I had invested my $20,000. I'd have done $60,000.

So I pass this on to the Dan's Papers reviewers, and of course the New York Times who will, I'm telling you, love this.

Weather

On Sunday afternoon, a thunderstorm will wash away the accumulated damp heat of the weekend. Temperatures will drop to the low eighties by seven p.m. Squash and zucchini are ripe. All events this weekend are cancelled because of the extreme weather.

August 14-15. Friday and Saturday temperatures will be in the seventies and low eighties with overcast skies. Rain will start Saturday night, and Hurricane Igor is predicted to march through Quogue at 4 p.m. Sunday, give or take an hour or two, with winds of 125 miles an hour. The summer people are told to go home early Sunday morning, and the locals are told to evacuate as soon as possible.

Many summer people do go home early, but few local people evacuate. To them, this is the most exciting thing that's happened since Billie drove his Camaro into Town Pond. However, the rain doesn't start until Sunday morning and by Sunday evening, Hurricane Igor has veered to the east and hit Block Island, sinking it. Fishing boats are sent out from Montauk to look for survivors in the dark. Many Block Islanders are rescued. But many are not. President Bush declares Monday, August 16 to be an official day of mourning. He also declares a full-scale investigation to see if the sinking has been caused by terrorism. Sunflowers start to bloom. A polo match in Bridgehampton scheduled for Saturday is cancelled because of the unpredictable weather. There is a run of summer stripers.

August 20-22. A perfect weekend in the Hamptons. Sunny and clear and breezy. Temperatures hovering in the high seventies and low eighties both Saturday and Sunday. Saturday afternoon's Artist-Writer's Softball Game goes off on schedule in East Hampton. However, late on Sunday there is a nasty fly-by of billions of locusts blotting out the sun. This lasts for about two and a half hours. Like a full eclipse. Stay indoors. Potato trucks are out bringing the potato harvest to market.

August 27-29. Friday afternoon is warm and muggy, eighty five degrees with clear skies, but two big hurricanes are charging up the coast toward the Hamptons. Hurricane Puffy is further out in the Atlantic than Hurricane Odalis but they are running side by side. They are expected to both hit Long Island on Saturday afternoon, right in the middle of the opening day festivities at the week long Hamptons Classic Horse Show in Bridgehampton. Homes are boarded up. Boats are lashed to the pilings in their slips. People go down to their basements. By 10 a.m. on Saturday, a fine drizzle is falling and the barometer has dropped to 27.891, the lowest ever recorded in history. Suddenly, Hurricane Puffy veers ninety degrees to the east while Hurricane Odalis veers ninety degrees to the west. They collide over Southampton and the result, accompanied by a huge bang, is an equalization of all this opposing energy. The sun comes out, the winds drop to zero, the rains stop and the temperature rises to eighty two. It's a magnificent summer's day. The Classic begins on time.

Sunday is another magnificent day with scattered clouds and temperatures in the mid-eighties. Everyone goes to the beach, but they keep looking at the horizon. Wine grapes are ready to be picked.

September 3-5. The last weekend of the summer. It will be partly cloudy with a scattered chance of showers on Saturday, with clearing on Sunday. This is the weekend that both George Bush and John Kerry sweep through the Hamptons scooping up money at fundraisers. Bush starts from Westhampton and goes east. Kerry starts in Montauk and goes west. The motorcades cross paths in front of Citarella's in Water Mill Sunday afternoon causing a traffic jam that lasts five hours. When it clears up, hordes of people with metal detectors sweep up after them, gathering up various bits of cash dropped by the wayside as the candidates have roared through.

Late Sunday afternoon, just after the conclusion of the big Grand Prix at the Hampton Classic Horse Show in Bridgehampton, it will begin raining loaves and fishes all throughout the Hamptons, with attendant thunder and lightning, but no rain. In the early evening it rains frogs and eels. Then in the late evening, it rains cats and dogs. The temperature hovers around eighty five degrees into the night, but begins to plummet around 4 a.m., dropping to the low forties and thirties in the early morning. There is a frost. The first time it has been this early in the autumn in recorded history. Late Monday afternoon, it snows six inches. Winter has arrived. Time to plant fields of rye grass.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

Following is the publishers note, written by Genie Chipps Henderson, that introduces the book The Free Life: The Spirit of Courage, Folly & Obsession by Anthony Smith. The book, which won the 13th Annual Editors' Book Award, was published in 1995 by Pushcart Press, and is available to order from them by mail or email.

The Free Life: The Spirit of Courage, Folly & Obsession

By Anthony Smith

Publishers Note

It seemed like a movie but it wasn't.

Imagine three adventurers – two men and a woman – in a balloon, seven stories tall, attempting to drift across the Atlantic Ocean in a quixotic duel with nature. What a fine romance. Something daring, even exotic, and an Atlantic crossing had never been done before.

In beauty, brains, and brawn, the three balloonists were perfectly cast for the adventure. The Andersons, Pamela and Rod, were a young American couple who had conceived of the adventure and kept it alive through four years of technical and financial setbacks. Malcolm Brighton, their pilot, was a blond Brit with all the dash and swagger required for this world of derring-do. The flight of The Free Life would be his 100th ascent.

The launch of The Free Life was exhilarating. The final sand bag thrown over and suddenly the giant orange balloon leaping free of all earthly restraints and floating confidently upward into a clear blue sky. Down below hundreds of well wishers ran, waving, crying, declaring among themselves it was the most fantastic thing they had ever seen. It seemed a symbol for an entire age – a last great hurrah for the spirited 60's.

The Free Life is little more than a footnote now in the annals of ballooning history, remembered mainly by family and friends, forgotten in large by 25 years of other triumphs and disasters – and yet here told is an amazing story.

For me, the story began long before the balloon lifted off from that Long Island meadow in 1970. Pamela Brown, the young woman of this adventure, had been my best friend since we were teenagers. Like all girls we spent endless hours imagining and dreaming our futures. Pam's dreams were bigger, more daring and exciting than any I had encountered. In those days young women were just waking up to the possibilities of their lives. Pam was in the vanguard of that awakening. She didn't need Betty Friedan to tell her that the world was out there for the taking. She didn't need role models (a term just coming into feminist vogue). Pam was her own role model. If asked, her heroines were Scarlett O'Hara, Bette Davis and Heathcliff's Cathy. She was a funny girl with a comedian's sharp sense of timing and sweeping ambitions that far out distanced life as it was lived in Lexington, Kentucky in the late 1950's.

Together we took on all the mystery of growing up. The youngest of five children, her family seemed glamorous to me. Pam's father was a well-known Kentucky politician, a maverick lawyer whose rousing orations in the courtroom were worthy of Clarence Darrow and the stuff of Southern lore. Her older brother, at twenty-six, had made a fortune buying out Col. Sander's and franchising Kentucky Fried Chicken. Her mother and sisters were all beauties and very social. I remember the large cedar closets upstairs in Pam's house filled with ball gowns which we dressed up in on countless afternoons playing out the repertoire of characters and scenes Pam devised.

All things considered, it was an easy life but we chafed and rebelled against its traditions and its sleepy expectations for girls as much as we dared. There had to be some-

Pam was a born adventurer. She wanted to go everywhere, and do everything. She wanted to be the first, the best and the brightest. She would be a great actress, her name in lights, a legend in her own time. No one laughed at the cliché. Just the opposite, everyone believed her. She thrilled me with her ambitions and along the way I began to create some of my own. Given time, I believe Pam would have made her grand mark. She was brimming with talent and very attractive with dark brunette hair and eyes to match. There must have been a down side to Pam but, unless time has dimmed my memory, I can't remember when she wasn't full of gladness, unafraid and willing to try anything. Even to the extent of making a complete fool of herself. 'I do'er or die' was her oft quoted motto.

Sadly, die she did. At the age of 28 along with her husband of three years, Rod Anderson, and the British balloonist Malcolm Brighton. Their bold dream of being the first to cross the Atlantic in a balloon ended in a stormy North Atlantic somewhere off the coast of Newfoundland. There, the three adventurers vanished without a trace.

Four years in the planning, their balloon had only 30 hours in the air. The news services followed the sea and air search which took place for weeks afterwards but interest dwindled when other, more pressing events took precedence. Three weeks after their flamboyant take-off they were declared dead. And those of us who loved them, had envied their aplomb, had cheered them on and wished them well went about the business of continuing our lives, somewhat less sure of ourselves.

Anthony Smith did not know Pam or Rod and he was not there when The Free Life ascended from a field in East Hampton, New York but he was a great friend and mentor to

It's Easy To Learn
With Professionals

We have taught hundreds of people of all ages to sail - to enjoy the thrill of the wind moving a boat through the water and to experience the quiet beauty and relaxation of sailing.

The waters of Peconic and Gardiners Bay are a special part of the East End. They should be part of your enjoyment of the area.

Our two day beginner course is taught on 23 foot keelboats. After the course you can rent a 23 foot sailboat. And you can follow the beginner course with more advanced courses.

WINDOWS ON LONG ISLAND WINE

Earth Pledge and The Long Island Wine Council held the 14th annual "Windows on Long Island Wine" event at Capitale in Soho, a beautifully restored Beaux-Arts bank building. Thirty Long Island wineries poured some of their finest wines as twenty-six NYC and Long Island restaurants served their favorite dishes. Proceeds benefited Earth Pledge's "Farm To Table Initiative" which aims to educate the public about food and agriculture issues.

ARTRAGEOUS

The annual fun-filled kids' event, Artrageous, benefits the Edwin Gould Services for Children and Families, which supports programs for many disadvantaged children residing in foster care in New York City. Last year, we had a special moment, when my daughter Emily sat down and started painting along with another girl, who we later found out was Broadway producer Stewart Lane's daughter Leah, and then artist Erica Mason completed the kids work with a portrait of both children. The painting went at auction for upwards of $10,000. This year, we walked around and played the games – it was a true carnival for kids. We met some of the celebrities (the Real Dora!) and said "Hi" to some of the Hamptons people we knew, including the Hiltons (Kathy and Rick are getting their own TV show) and the Lanes. It was a great event for the kids and for the kids that the group helps.

Grease for Peace

"Thieves Take 5,000 Pounds of Used Grease May 17, 2004 Assoc. Press Edmond, Okla.-Thieves nearly slipped away with 5,000 pounds of used cooking grease bound for recycling. Authorities say the grease from three restaurants has a resale value of about $380. The latest theft occurred sometime between Monday night and Tuesday morning, police said. Police think they were looking to turn in the grease for the recycling value, police spokeswoman, Glynda Chu, said.

Sometimes people ask me how I come up with my wacky ideas. Usually I look at something ordinary and wait for my mind to take a left off Reality Road and there I go. Sometimes, I just read the news about someone else's mind that took a left off Reality Road and wonder where they found that exit. Because as everyone knows, two wrongs don't make a right, but three lefts do.

Why did they steal 5000 pounds of used grease? I can see stealing maybe a thousand pounds to share with friends for deep frying oysters and clams, that makes sense. But 5000 pounds? Do you know how much the ferry would charge for 5000 pounds of used grease transport? I don't know what their latest charges are for lubrication transportation, but I don't think they'd let 5000 pounds of grease just slip by!

I just wanted to be in the room when the grease thieves were working out this plan.

"Look Joe, we need some money. We gotta steal something and turn it over quick for a buck."

"Yeah....what should we steal? Jewelry?"

"No, you gotta break into a house or store. We gotta steal something that's not illegal to steal so we don't get in trouble if we get caught."

"Good thinkin'! What can we legally steal?"

"Aluminum cans! People put them by the road for pick-up, we'll steal them before the recycler comes."

"I like the concept....if it's by the road, it's public. But cans... I dunno... so noisy."

"Yeah, I forgot about the noise. Guess that leaves out bottles too."

"Yeah. So what's left?"

"Restaurants throw out tons of food, I remember from working at Burger King. Maybe we could steal the tossed out food and make ourselves a nice chunk of change?"

"Nah... food spoils. We need something already spoiled, you know, that nobody wants for anything, that way we make a pure profit."

"What about barrels of used grease?"

"Hey, I think you're onto something.... nobody wants it, except for recycle, it's quiet, and we'll be the only ones in town who thought to steal it! We can corner the whole market on used grease."

"We'll be the Grease Kings of Oklahoma!"

"We'll steal the grease and make a clean getaway. We can cross six states by sundown."

"Yeah... it ain't like we gotta wait for a ferry or nothin'."

"We'll sell it out of state. I'm tellin' you, Joe, we'll be hundredaires by this time next week."

I feel so sorry for these thieves. How are they gonna hold their heads up in the "big house" for stealing used grease? You could get maybe a little respect for fresh grease, but used? No thieves on Shelter Island would even think of grease. Clams, yes. Barbecue briquettes, definitely. Deer repellent, absolutely!

Malcolm Brighton. A scientist, a writer, traveller in remote regions, trans-African motorcyclist and lighter-than-air enthusiast for three decades Anthony's many books recount exciting adventure and improbable exploits. At the receiving end of innumerable mishaps he has learned the hard way about impulse and risk, folly and success, advance and disaster. Perhaps that is why he has never been able to put the saga of The Free Life to rest.

When his good friend Malcolm lost his life with two unknown Americans, Anthony viewed it as an ill-conceived folly with a predictable outcome. Still, it nagged. He had lost a friend and that is not easily put to rest. The question of why had to be answered.

Why follow impulses? Why accept risks? Why put one's life needlessly in danger? 'Because it's there' is the traditional, unhelpful answer to the age-old question of 'Why?' Yet often it is wrong-headed determination, refusal to withdraw, and stubborn will that lies at the base of triumph and disaster.

Twenty-five years after The Free Life event, Anthony began contacting those of us who had been involved, piecing together its story from notes and papers saved, interviews and news articles, balancing his own thoughts, anecdotes and conclusions around these human trials. His book is more than the story of those ill-fated three. It is about risk, impulse, and gamble. The Free Life probes, inquires, reveals and details these features of humanity. Indeed, why do humans behave in this manner? Why do impulses become so important even in the face of incredible risk?

This then is the book that came to Pushcart Press. It is an account of meticulous research and great feeling. It explores the very nature of adventuring, the triumphs as well as failures. Ultimately, it honors my own friends perhaps not so much for their deeds but for their place in the history of all brave dreamers who cast at one bold throw all or nothing.

With Susan W. Simm

A Sound (Avenue) Idea

Contrary to the beliefs of those annoying people who go around acting like the North Fork is inferior to the South Fork in every way, the NF does have one big advantage: instead of one road that runs its length, like the South Fork's dreaded Montauk Highway, it has TWO roads.

(There are those of you who will argue that you CAN take the "backroads" on the South Fork, but the last time I traveled them on a Sunday afternoon they were almost as crowded as the Highway, now that so many Hamptons journalists have gone into the lucrative "shortcut" map business. But that's another story.)

The southernmost of the North Fork's main roads is, well, the Main Road, or Route 25, and it passes at a civilized pace through all of the quaint villages. The northernmost starts out as Sound Avenue, which begins in Wading River and meanders through picturesque northern Riverhead until you get to Mattituck. There, just past the exit to Love Lane, it turns abruptly into the Autobahn. Aka Route 48, the North Road is a race car driver's dream. Flat and nearly straight with few (too few?) stop lights, the road is a conduit for drivers heading to Orient, but also to the Connecticut casinos, an issue of some contention among those of us who live here.

Anyway, while most of the NF's wineries and tasting rooms are located along the Main Road, several of them, including founding vineyard Castello di Borghese/ Hargrave Vineyard, are located on the Sound Avenue/ North Road route. The North Road was a different road back in the pre-casino 70s, when Alex and Louisa planted their first vines in Cutchogue. The ferry still went to New London, but the ride to get to New England for school or family vacations didn't reach the frenzied pace it does today when slot machines and Black Jack tables beckon.

As a result of this traffic, some people have grown reluctant to stop at North Road wineries, opting instead to visit those located on the slower (though more crowded) Main Road. So several wineries and vineyards along the northern corridor put their heads together and came up with an idea: After patrons have purchased a bottle of wine at each participating winery – Waters Crest, Castello di Borghese, Lieb Family Cellars, Macari Vineyards, Martha Clara Vineyards and Palmer Vineyards (visit www.liwines.com for locations) – they will receive a stamp on a card. When the card is full, they may turn it in at any of the wineries for a complimentary hat or T-shirt bearing a hip "Route 48/Sound Avenue" logo.

Roads, like everything else, take turns being popular. The North Road, though fast paced, is HARDLY the strip-mall dotted wasteland an article in Newsday portrayed it as last year. The farm and vineyard views to the north and south are not only extraordinarily beautiful, they're the last of their kind on Long Island.

So the next time you head out to our wine country, take the northern route. There are not only some very good winemakers who would love to see you, but with every bottle of NF wine and farmstand purchase you make comes the promise that those views will be there for a very long time, a promise only your support can help make come true. Cheers.

Glorious Gardening At Trimble's Of Corchaug

A North Fork Institution Still Shines Brightly, Especially During Planting Season

By Jolie Trueman-Honey

The best antidote to a soggy spring is a drive along the North Fork's Main Road, where nurseries displaying their riotous array of colorful annuals can be found interspersed among the wineries that have made the region famous. One thing is for sure: you're never more than a couple of minutes away from a flat of purple petunias or a fine glass of Merlot. However, as any wine connoisseur can tell you, not all Chardonnays are created equal. So it is with plants.

Trimble's Nursery, established in 1991, is the gold standard by which all nurseries ought to be judged. Voted Best Garden Center in Dan's Papers' Best of the Best Contest every year from 1998 through 2002, Trimble's clearly lives up to its motto: Imagination – Experience – Quality.

Owners Anne Trimble and Nancy Leskody are proud of their well-deserved reputation. These two women know plants. Anne, a native Rhode Islander, attended the University of Rhode Island as a horticulture major. After graduation, she moved to New York where she became the Director of Children's Education at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden and later had the distinction of being appointed the first landscape director for Tavern on the Green, Central Park's world famous restaurant. It is Anne who deserves the kudos for their fabulous gardens. Co-owner of GEO Design Custom Gardens, Anne provided landscape plans and construction for co-ops, roof-top gardens and terraces throughout Manhattan.

The welcoming entrance to Trimble's Nursery

Partners Anne Trimble and Nancy Leskody

Nancy grew up right here on Long Island in Valley Stream, and her love of nature led her to an agricultural certificate from Farmingdale and a job with the New York City Parks Department. The two met when Nancy, working in Central Park, frequented the Tavern on the Green ladies' room. (I can hardly blame her; if you haven't used it, it's a definite 10!). The rest is history.

When they bought the Cutchogue property in 1991, it was an existing garden center in very poor condition. It took them a year just to clean out the greenhouse and begin to grow plants there. But clean they did, and construct and improve. Nancy says, "Our goal was simply to be the best nursery on the North Fork. In fact, it still is." A stroll through their lovely four acre grounds, bears that out.

Trimble's specializes in rare and unusual trees, shrubs, perennials, annuals and herbs. But not only is their merchandise special; their service is as well. Anne still does what she loves most: designs and installs gardens. Whatever your vision of the perfect garden is (from a formal Japanese tea garden to a flower-besotted field), Anne can make it happen.

Nancy runs the business, providing the finest quality plants for the most reasonable price. And this pursuit takes her all over the country. She tells me, "Nowhere do you pay less for plants than on the East Coast. I try to keep our prices in line, but one thing I'll never sacrifice is quality. Everything that we sell is top of the line." While you can buy a flat of impatiens cheaper in places along the Main Road or at the giant wholesalers, Nancy says her customers come back year after year saying that what they've bought at Trimble's "just doesn't die."

Also, you won't find their variety anywhere else. Sure, you can find verbena in any nursery. But Trimble's has verbena in five different colors. And Nancy tells me that some 80% of their plants are propagated and grown right on their property.

So proud are they of their wares that they display their name right on their pots along with planting instructions.

But a trip to Trimble's is more than just picking up a bag of potting soil. You can spend hours meandering through their lush grounds. Love hydrangea? Check out Hoophouse #10 where you can find Nikko Blue, Tokyo Delight, Pee Gee, Blue Wave, Sunlight, and many other varieties. Looking for climbers for your new trellis? Visit Hoophouse #9, the Vine House, where clematis (in every color imaginable), trumpet vines, ivies, grape vines and climbing hydrangea reside. In fact, if you're smart, you'll pick

Big Event Of The Week

Opening At Cecily's Love Lane Gallery Landscapes By Isabelle Haran-Leonardi Mattituck, May 23, 3-7 p.m.

After a major renovation and expansion into an adjoining space, Cecily's Love Lane Gallery on Mattituck's eponymous main street, will re-open with a show of local artist Isabelle Haran-Leonardi's landscapes entitled "A Year In New Suffolk." There will be an artist's reception on Sunday, May 23, from 3- 7 p.m. in the new gallery to the right of the original shop. The show, which includes a dozen large scale landscape acrylics, features similar Cutchogue and New Suffolk subjects that were painted during different seasons.

In addition to regularly offering the work of several local artists, Cecily's also offers ready made and custom frames, posters and prints. All work is expertly done on the premises. Open Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Call 298-8610 for further information.

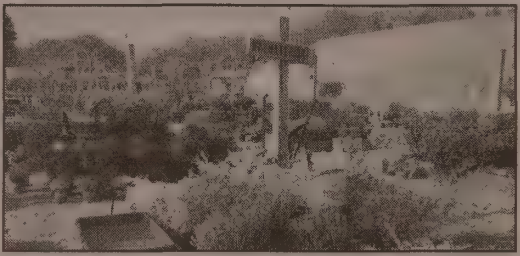
yourself up a site map that can help you hone in on the hosta house, or ferret out the flowering annual flats. Not sure what you want? Stroll through the Idea Garden for inspiration or ask any of the helpful blue or orange t-shirted crew.

And speaking of help, Anne and Nancy are happy to share their expertise, offering free lunchtime lectures every Saturday in May (with more planned in June) from noon to 1 p.m. Bring your lunch (they'll provide the drinks!) while either Anne or Nancy discusses topics such as "Gardening 101" which covers all the basics, and "We Do Let Our Friends Plant Annuals" which takes participants on a nursery tour where they'll learn what's new and "what's right for where," with emphasis on maximum color, longevity and texture. Call or pick up their brochure for the lecture schedule.



Strolling the grounds at Trimble's is always a treat

So respected is this nursery that the Perennial Plant Association, (a group of plant breeders, wholesale and retail growers and garden center owners from across the country), whose annual symposium is being held in New York City this summer, chose Trimble's as a stop on their area tour. Now that is an honor.

So, if you love to plant, if gardening is the light at the end of your winter tunnel, if colorful arrays of flowers heal whatever ails you, a pilgrimage to Trimble's is an absolute must!

Trimble's of Corchaug Nursery is located at 20985 Main Rd. in Cutchogue. Hours are 9 to 5 daily. 631 734-6494.

Tuscan House
Regional Italian Cuisine

Welcome to the Tuscan House

Executive chef William Oster has made it his life's work to make your experience authentic and enjoyable. Billy frequently travels back to Italy, actively cooking, and researching the food, wines, and ingredients throughout the many regions. Bringing you back the true flavors of Italy. This past January it was back to the motherland. Billy was invited to cook in restaurants located in the Rome and Latium areas. He was also a guest at a private estate winery in Montalcino. Even though it was a working trip, it was yet another culturally positive and truly enlightening gastronomical experience. We also celebrated our fifth anniversary in March and would like to thank everyone for their patronage. We hope you had a wonderful winter and look forward to serving you this spring and summer.

The Tuscan House is open for lunch
Mon. thru Sat. 11:30 to 3:00
Dinner is served 3:30 until closing,
Sunday dinner is served
3:00 until closing.

We also can accommodate intimate parties, rehearsal dinners, showers and catering for all occasions.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

CHARLES WALLER AT LIZAN TOPS

There's a word written at the bottom of Charles Waller's work, "Voodoo," which can easily be missed: enigma. It's not only that enigma applies to the concept of voodoo itself, but that Mr. Waller's wedding dress as motif is also a riddle. Voodoo and a wedding dress have other common meanings. In most cultures, a wedding dress is a signifier for marriage. Yet the idea of marriage goes much farther, connoting ritual and celebration; the act of voodoo is also a practice predicated on these same notions. But here's where the enigma comes in. Is Mr. Waller asking the question, "How are voodoo and marriage similar?"

Are we reading too much into this word and its position, both its subtle arrangement in the piece and its philosophical meaning? If we're correct, however, it's then obvious that Mr. Waller is giving a derogatory connotation to a wedding dress when he compares it to voodoo.

Of course, there's another interpretation possible, one that is equally sinister yet still a puzzle: the notion that both voodoo and marriage cast a "spell," over which the "victim" has no control.

But we're still puzzled. Are we being too hard on the absolutely splendorous wedding dresses which function as art? In other words, are we giving the objects some significance that goes beyond Mr. Waller's intention to simply showcase a beautiful thing?

By so doing, we have devised our own puzzle. Call it a critic's preoccupation. At least this critic's, who likes to find enigmas if and when they exist.

Even so, we don't think we're too far off the track. Consider that Mr. Waller's wedding dress is not always white, but red and green as well, colors that often carry negative connotations.

"Arlesian in a Red Dress"

Consider, too, other negative signifiers: some wedding dresses feature a scorch spot (from a hot iron) around the area where the heart lies. The design of one wedding dress even suggests female genitals. The multiple layering of the skirts implies immobility.

There's another aspect that gives evidence to Mr. Waller's puzzle, residing in the arrangement of the pieces. Several pieces we see are indeed a sight to behold, with the dresses serving as both object and art (the material itself suggests a canvas on which the decor is placed).

As we follow the works through the spaces, however, the last stop features the dresses surrounded by other art work (flowers painted on the canvas) and one especially intriguing object, a wedding dress wrapped around an actual pole. Is this a phallic symbol or what? We interpret it as something more: the idea that the dress is swinging around the object, free at last.

Charles Waller's exhibit will be on view at East Hampton's Lizan Tops Gallery until June 16.

HONORING THE ARTIST: WILLEM DE KOONING

This week's cover by Willem de Kooning begs, even demands, additional study and insight. And why not? It's not every day that such a distinguished artist graces the pages of a weekly news publication. This one or any other one, for that matter.

To say that readers, art historians, and art lovers alike are particularly pleased seeing his work in this way is an understatement. To remember that de Kooning lived in East Hampton, where he created some of his finest work, is an understatement as well.

Thus, it's important to note that the cover, "Suburb in Havana (1958)," was indeed painted in East Hampton, but based on a trip de Kooning took to Cuba searching for Hemingway's house. (This critic didn't learn if he ever, in fact, found the writer's residence.)

While the piece is obviously abstract, we can discern the horizon line and the blue sky. The remaining configuration, done in a brilliant yellow shade, is not as clear, however. Does it represent the feelings that de Kooning experienced in Havana, the city's vibrant demeanor? The soul of the city if you will, considering that the exterior or physical aspects are already represented in the sky and horizon. Capturing Havana's mood by de Kooning or anyone else might have been a bit ambiguous, remembering that this was 1958 and Castro's Cuba was not in place.

What is clear, however, is de Kooning's painting style which represented a departure, a looser approach that would not appear again until the 1980s. Critics describe it as "reduction of pictorial means," containing fewer strokes, but executed in a broad way. Simply put, de Kooning's style had become less complex, less intricate, or, as he put it, "It seems that a lot of artists, when they get older they get simpler."

De Kooning's interest in nature instead of urbanity was another change during this same time period. He had a particular fascination for nature, saying "I really get very elated by again looking, by again seeing, that the sky is blue, that the grass is green."

While "Suburb in Havana" recalls nature, it is de Kooning's 1958 "Montauk Highway" (a special interest for us locals) that featured another kind of nature, the open road with its curving shoulders and grassy embankments.

Art critics point out that this predisposition for highways recall de Kooning's love of streets, especially New York's streets which he walked regularly. (We can't help but add that filmmaker Martin Scorcese also loved Manhattan's Mean Streets.)

Dan Welden, a local resident and well-known printmaker, also recalls another fascination of de Kooning, making stone lithographs. Mr. Welden was working with de Kooning's wife, Elaine, during the late 1970s when she suggested her husband might be interested in making prints. Thus began an association with de Kooning that Mr. Welden cherishes to this day. "I was flabbergasted when Elaine made the suggestion, although I had previously worked with Jasper Johns and Robert Motherwell. I remember when he was painting, he would sit in silence for a long time, each of us sitting on armchairs. He wouldn't say very much at all, but from time to time would get up and add a few strokes. We did four prints together. He would draw on the stone, and I would take it back to my studio and proof it. He would then approve the print if he liked it. After I printed the edition, he would sign it. I remember once he signed his name on an angle or upside down, something like that."

Mr. Welden pauses. "He was very clear about what he wanted. He was also the most gentle person I ever knew. I felt so peaceful when I was around him."

theatre review: the joys of sex... by gordin & christiano

The Joys of Sex, the wholesome musical that was a sold-out hit at the 2002 New York International Fringe Festival, winning the Audience Favorite Award, is back. With book and music by Melissa Levis and David Weinstein the unabashedly silly show, featuring a spirited cast of four, accompanied by a pulsating three-man band, opened last week Off-Broadway at The Variety Arts Theatre, where it is an entertaining delight. As soon as you enter the theatre's lobby you get the good vibes, which set the frivolous mood for the sassy evening. There is a little sex shop in a corner to the left selling mementos from the play, the ushers greet you in naughty aprons adorned with the torso of a life size semi-nude woman, and once in the theatre, a vibrant red fabric decorated with a series of huge red lips hanging from the walls. There is a feel good excitement in the air, and if you look around, you realize there is an eclectic mix of mainstream young and old waiting to be lifted from the doldrums of the possibly hum-drum.

The zestful performers immediately engage the audience with an uninhibited delivery of the show's first song, "The Joys of Sex," setting the evening's tone of release. They are four vivacious actors possessing wonderful comic timing, as well as boldly expressive singers with lovely voices. The cast never lets up for a moment, playing the leading roles in addition to doubling up to play the seven supporting parts.

The cute storyline about a couple, Howard and Stephs (Ron Bohmer and Stephanie Kurtzuba), who have been married for three years and are having sex five times a day in an effort to conceive their first child, is really just an excuse for the show's eighteen songs. Unbeknownst to Howard, Stephs has been faking her orgasms and secretly believes her inability to have one is the reason she can't conceive. They have a friend Brian (David Josefsberg), who still lives with his parents and longs for a real relationship. Meanwhile April (Jenelle Lynn Randall), a hotsy totsy ex-flame of Howard, moves into the building, setting up a series of fun-filled encounters between the four and the supporting characters, which presents a host of silly opportunities for the cast to sing the appealing songs, and in the process to divulge their respective sexual fantasies..

Ron Bohmer And Stephanie Kurtzuba In Joys of Sex

The evening is a fast-paced musical revue directed in an outrageous campy style that will keep a smile on your face throughout. The bright songs about just how funny sex can be covers a wide range of sexual situations without ever being vulgar or tasteless. There are songs about the inability to have an orgasm ("'O' No"), songs about making sexual contacts on the computer ("Intercourse on the Internet"), songs about how to hold back and wait ("In the Parlor Be a Lady"), songs about how to let go ("Feel the Tiger"), and love songs ("Making Love with You"). They are all charming with clever lyrics that ask little of you, except to relax and have a good time.

There seems to be something for everyone here as the creators have been careful not to offend anyone. They have skillfully crafted a terrific mainstream entertainment lacking any real edge, which could easily be transferred to any number of regional theatres. Performed without an intermission, the evening is a laugh-filled 90-minute irreverent good time that reminds you sex is the spice of life; so add a little variety to your life and get the kinks out.

The Joys of Sex is now playing Off-Broadway at The Variety Arts Theatre, 110 Third Avenue. Tickets are available through Tele-charge by calling 212-239-6200 or on the web at www.telecharge.com. To purchase tickets in person visit the box office.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Van Helsing

BOO!

You can make of the exclamation "BOO!" what you will. Regarding Van Helsing, the current horror film, you can take "BOO!" as a scare or a critical appraisal. When a movie like Van Helsing shudders on the big screen, do you gasp and tremble with fear or snicker and laugh with it? Or, do you laugh at it and write it off as dopey junk? Its writer/director, Stephen Sommers, doesn't seem to know (he's still shaking pixel-loaded sand out of his sandals and head from his remake of The Mummy and its sequel). The Mummy giggles at itself when its star Brendan Fraser face the gritty horrors with a wacky grin. You know where the movie stood. But, with the fine actor, Hugh Jackman, in the eponymous role of Van Helsing, it's difficult to tell, since his demon-destroying persona is as flat as a black and white comic drawing shaded by Ben Day dots. Needless to say, the dots never connect to make a thrilling hero of the 19th century fighter of vampires, ghouls, werewolves and all the etceteras that came together in the final Abbott and Costello hodge podges. Jackman, with flowing long hair, wide-brimmed hat, big-collared black coat and handy with a crossbow only manages to be as mishmoshy a character as the movie itself. Dry and dumb passages of expository mumbo-jumbo are supposed explanations and segues into Mr. Sommer's penchant for body splattering morphing of creatures, dead and alive, all the product of excessive digital computer images.

It's a loss to have Mr. Jackman wallowing in a glut of Universal Pictures franchise monsters: Dracula, Frankenstein's Creature, Wolfman and new flying Draculettes – especially since he gave an insightful dimension to X-Men's brooding Wolverine. Think now of the famed actor Shuler Hensley as the Frankenstein Monster! At least his performance works. Kate Beckinsale is squeezed into a pinching corset of leather and breathless, pompous-posy prose spoken in Bela Lugosi bloody-bad conviction. Her romance with Van Helsing is as unhinged as her alliance in the offensive against Dracula, who would recharge the Frankenstein Monster's power to incubate a hoard of bat babies – yuk! "Batty" is decidedly the word for Dracula's wives who would hatch the army of bat cuties.

Van Helsing, the man and his movie, does not revive the Transylvanian legend – it buries it. We can only hope that this oversized wooden stake to the heart works, for good. Fine, if it takes an extra silver bullet to the brains of the computer generators to stall the special effects that flood and drown the attempts at scary humor and, it used to be said that actors hated to work with children because a kid could easily upstage them. Today, actors are swamped by special effects – they're the brats feared even more than the breed of bat babes. It's time they grew up.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Everyone is getting ready for the Memorial Day holiday weekend here in the Hamptons. It should be a great beach, barbecue, and shopping weekend, so let's do it all and let's shop!

Privet Cove sitting pretty at 69 Jobs Lane in Southampton, is presently offering a 15% off sale of all 'in stock' furniture that includes all of their fine manufactured furniture as well as the antique furniture line from the Northeastern USA to the Far East. The sale runs until Memorial Day weekend. This year, by the first weekend in June, Privet Cove will be featuring an expanded collection of fine coral and shell specimens from the Andaman and South China seas. Look for Dutch from Indonesia and French from Vietnam. There are occasional tables made of antique tribal drum that still retain their original paint and leather percussion tops, to which a top of round clear polished glass has been placed, giving these drums a newly useful existence. Cocktail, dining and serving tables made of antique doors originate in the outer island homes of Indonesia. Also unique and exquisite are the sixty-inch round marble-topped dining tables at unbelievable prices. If you love farm tables and chairs, custom made of antique barn-woods by a farmer-craftsman, you can order them in many sizes. There is also a newly expanded line of hurricane lamps and hanging glass-drop chandeliers for both in or outside the home. Also a new line of European skin products and soaps are available here. Stop in and say hi to Anthony; he will be happy to assist you.

Also at 91 Jobs Lane in Southampton, you and your dog should stop into Little Lucy's where they are stocked with a unique collection of party dresses, beachwear, collars, leads and carriers for your pampered pooch. There is also a pet specialist on hand to evaluate your dogs response while trying on the latest pet fashions. And…a prize will go to the best dressed dog who reflects a superiority complex. Sounds like fun to me! Give a call to Little Lucy's "Canine Couture Anonymous Support Group" at 631-287-2352 for more information.

Job's Lane Jewelers on Windmill Lane in Southampton is celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary and has every item on sale in honor of that celebration. All diamond jewelry is slashed from 10% to 50% off the original price, silver jewelry reduced from 20% to 30% off, all 14kt gold and silver charms are discounted 20%, all pearl jewelry is marked down 20% and all estate jewelry is from 20% to 50% off. If you're thinking of a gift for the grad, the Zodiac watches are 50% off and all citizen watches are discounted 20%.

At the Memorial Day Sale, from May 10 through June 12, at Kazdin Pools, Inc. on Country Road 39 in Southampton, you can save big bucks on all specially marked BioGuard chemicals, accessories and famous maker pool toys and games. Or, how about just stopping in for a pool? Ain't nothing wrong with that one!

Bridgehampton's Compliments on Main Street is having a lingerie sale. You would be surprised when you walk through the door, how much merchandise this shop has to offer in the way of swimwear, loungewear, bath wear, nightwear and so much. Check the Southampton location for the same great merchandise and savings.

Nearby at Aimee's Closet there is also a sale going on. This shop has it all, lots of pretty skirts, tops, jewelry, accessories and so much more.

While you're strolling Main Street in Bridgehampton, stop in at Anne Moore's for the finest selection of hats for every occasion. I have already picked my Hampton Classic 2004 hat out here. I'm ready!

Triangle Home Furnishings in Bridgehampton is having a "Warehouse Sale" for one day only on Saturday, May 22, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on furniture, lamps and accessories. The warehouse sale will be held on Mecox Road at Horse Mill Lane. Call 537-7010 for information.

It's that time of year again for Main Beach on Montauk Highway in Wainscott. Expect a tidal wave of new and used windsurfing, surfing and kayaking gear of epic proportions on May 22 and May 23. You can buy, sell or trade everything and anything that floats or goes near the water. For information about this crazy event, and the free BBQ and board raffle, call 537-2716. Until next week, ciao and Happy Memorial Day Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you…

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Lust. Let's face it, if you're a car guy like me, there are certain cars over the years for which you have lusted. There are some dream cars I've wanted and, in some instances, had the good fortune to own. The first sports car I really craved was an MG. When I was a freshman in college I saved enough money to buy a used 1952 MGTD. It was black with a tan interior and ran like a dream. In contrast to the, even then, troubled reputation of British sports cars, this little roadster never gave me an ounce of grief.

While owning the MG, I was bitten by the sports car bug. A girl with whom I was going out had a father who drove a 1955 Jaguar XK 140. Was it a beauty. It made my MG look dowdy. His car was also black with a tan interior, with wire wheels that were painted black to match the car. A striking combination. My lust for his daughter waned, but continued for the Jaguar. However, when compared to the MGs of the period, Jags were pricey in used condition. My TD cost all of $800, but any good used Jag went for around $2,000. Eventually, I came upon an excellent 1956 XK-140MC roadster priced at $1,800. I was in seventh heaven in that red roadster and owned it for several years. With the exception of its overheating in traffic, it never really gave me any trouble. All Jaguars, since day one, overheated in traffic. It was part of their charm.

One day I was in the basement of an Oldsmobile dealer located on Broadway, looking at used cars. In the corner of my eye I spotted what appeared to be a dust-covered '55 Porsche Speedster. I found out that the previous owner was the singer, Leslie Uggams, and yes, the car was for sale. I purchased it for $1,200 and after cleaning it up, discovered that it was in pretty good shape. I loved that little bathtub of a car, the beginning of my love affair with Porsche products. After the Speedster, I purchased a 1965 Porsche 356SC Cabriolet, which felt like a Cadillac compared to the windowless Speedster.

Since I was now a "Porsche Guy," I was fascinated by their racing machines, so with some searching came upon a '55 550 Porsche Spyder that, believe it or not, because of tight storage space, was hanging on a guy's garage wall in Queens. I bought the car for $3,000 and, even though the aluminum body was a little dented, it ran quite well. Like James Dean, I drove this car on the city streets.

A friend had two other rare Porsche race cars, a 906 and a 908. I coveted these beauties so I put the word out to people whom I knew in Germany. Eventually, I was offered a 1967 Porsche 910 Bergspyder for $9,000. I bought it sight unseen. It was stored in a barn in Germany for several years and was covered with bird droppings. That car was the rarest of the rare, because Porsche had only made twenty-eight of them. My car was the twenty-sixth car produced. Because it was already in Germany, logic dictated that I ship it back to the Porsche factory to have it tuned up, with a general going over. The factory did a great job at reasonable cost, under $2,000. I owned, raced and used the car for the next three years without any service or tune-ups whatsoever. I sold it in 1978 for $40,000. In 1987 a Porsche 910 sold in Japan for one million two hundred thousand dollars. Who knew?

When doing advertising for Hertz Rent-A-Car, I had easy access to their Shelby Mustang GT-350 fleet of cars. These were wonderfully fast automobiles, but so unsuited for driving around Manhattan. They were noisy and rode like stagecoaches. My 550 Spyder was more comfortable. Today, I would love to own a Shelby.

I have always lusted after Italian automobiles and consider Italian car design to be the best in the world. Having had six Alfa Romeos of different vintages, from 1965 to 1985, I certainly admire their beauty and impressive technical and race pedigrees. And Ferrari? What more can any car enthusiast rhapsodize about this marque that hasn't already been said? I purchased a 1967 Ferrari Lusso in Florence for $4,000 in 1969. While driving in Manhattan, an enthusiastic Italian shouted to me, "Bella machina!" That sums up any and all Ferraris ever built.

Today I lust after any Ferrari, any Porsche and the upcoming Ford GT-40 retro rocket. Come to think of it, a little '55 Speedster or a well driven used Ferrari F-40 would look good in my garage. Then again, a Beechcraft Bonanza in the hanger and a Hinckley Bermuda 40 sailboat at my dock would definitely turn me on. Dare to dream.

Preparing for a Hike

Congratulations! You've decided to take a hike. There are some things you should know before you get out there to enjoy the beauty and tranquility of nature.

Most hikes are between 3 and 10 miles. If you find hikes listings in a local newspaper, the distance will be stated. If you haven't been exercising recently, even a modest distance can be a challenge. Many new hikers say that they prepared for a hike by instituting a daily evening walk around their neighborhood with family or friends. It's always a good idea to get a clean bill of health from your family physician before you start expanding your physical activity.

If after reading the hike listing,you find that you need more information, call the phone number provided as soon as possible. Hike listings in newspapers are often truncated due to space considerations. Sometimes vital information is missing; such as the advice to bring food for a picnic or that a hike is a brisk one and not intended for beginners. In addition, the listings may not always be accurate. I have even seen meeting places incorrectly stated in some hike descriptions; therefore, it is important to always verify the information you obtain from local newspapers by contacting the hike leader. That phone number most likely belongs to a volunteer, so please remember that this is a person who probably has as busy a schedule as you do. As soon as you realize that you are interested in participating in the hike and want more information, get in touch with the hike leader. This will give him or her time to call you back before the day of the hike. If you wait to call until the morning of the hike it may be too late to reach anyone.

If you are planning to explore your interest in hiking over several months, you might seriously consider investing in a membership in one of the trails groups. As a member of a trails group, you will receive a complete hike and events listing each month. You'll be able to plan ahead and not have to depend on finding hikes at the last minute by searching in the newspapers.

When you make a call for directions to the meeting place for the hike, have a map handy. Get yourself a regional street atlas. Hagstrom creates local maps that are excellent for this purpose. It is easier for someone to give you directions if you are following along on a map. Having a trail map is also helpful. See www.hike-li.com/fyi/trailmaps.

For hikes that start in one place and end somewhere else, there must be a means of getting back to your car. The way this is normally accomplished is by meeting at the end point of the hike, filling up a few cars and bringing the hikers to the starting point of the hike. At the end of the hike, a volunteer will drive the hikers who "shuttled" the group back to the starting point of the hike to retrieve their cars. Never depend on following a caravan to get to the beginning of a hike. If you are driving a "shuttle" car, be sure you know how to get to the destination on your own. Don't be timid about asking for directions. I have been on hikes where shuttle drivers were separated from the group. I can also remember one instance where there was an accident when someone was driving too fast in order to catch up with the rest of the caravan.

If you plan to hike on your own, you should study a map prior to the hike. You need to know where you are going and be able to share that information with someone else. It is also advisable to bring a trail map and a compass with you and know how to use them. A flashlight will be an important component in your backpack provisions. If you lose track of time and get caught in the woods in the dark, you will be relieved that you brought one along.

If you are alone, a cell phone is needed so you can get help in an emergency or if you get lost. If you need help in an emergency, dial 911. If dialing this emergency number gets you an out of town precinct, you can dial 1-877-BARRENS; they will redirect your call to a local precinct. You may also want to use your cell phone to report evidence of illegal activity in the woods. Examples of this would be dumped garbage, trees that have been cut down, or trails badly damaged by ATV use. You will be performing a valuable service by calling 1-877-BARRENS to report these illegal activities.

When you arrive at the meeting place for an organized hike, a sign-in-sheet will be passed around. It is the responsibility of the hike leader to have each participant sign-in. Please be considerate of your fellow hikers and of the hike leader, by helping to assure that this procedure is accomplished correctly and quickly. If you are a member, you need only to write your name. If you are not a member, provide your contact information. Your name, address, or telephone number will not be shared with anyone else. Since you are receiving a free service, it is a courtesy on your part to write neatly, so that the sponsoring group may contact you to ask if you would like to become a member. The ability to continue to offer free hikes of course depends on a group of members who contribute yearly dues. Membership fees help to pay for trails maintenance, to educate the public about the preservation of open space, and to provide members with a monthly newsletter. Recording the number of hike participants is also important

Away At School. . . By David Lion Rattiner

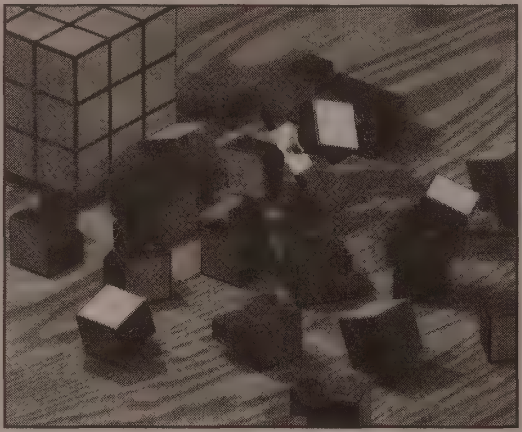
Rubik's Cube

I woke up yesterday in my Boston apartment wanting to get some breakfast cereal. Rolling out of bed, groggy and dressed in a pair of gym shorts, I walked through the living room into the small kitchen. I looked in the cabinet to see what my options were. We had some regular Cheerios, some granola, and a box of Wheaties. I reached for the granola, patting myself on the back for choosing the healthiest cereal, and walked back into the living room with a bowl, spoon and milk. I sat on the couch, made myself a nice healthy bowl of granola and decided that I would eat my breakfast while watching some TV.

In my apartment, I have turned an old surfboard into a coffee table, by taking an old surfboard of mine that has a bunch of cracks and bumps and is not really usable anymore and attaching two standard plastic trash cans to the bottom with some glue. It is by far the coolest coffee table you will ever see in your entire life.

I rested my cereal bowl on top of my surfboard coffee table and looked around for the remote control to the television. I was looking very hard for the remote control. It is almost always on the surfboard coffee table. There was a Maxim magazine, there was an old bag of Doritos, there were some pennies and some other change, there was the Rubik's cube that we are always trying to figure out, but no remote control. I did a sweep of the table again and passed over the Rubik's cube again. There was something strange about the Rubik's cube. From the way it was resting, all of the green squares appeared to be in the right place. This is pretty rare – we almost never get a side to go all to one color. I was impressed and suddenly intrigued at the possibility of solving this never ending battle of colors. Rubik's cubes are puzzles designed never to be solved, but for some reason there is just a sliver of hope that it can be done. This little sliver of hope taps into the human psyche and forces any person who ever gets their hands on one to wrestle the little block of colors until their wrists hurt.

I had the Rubik's cube in my hand now and began checking the other sides of it. Hmm…another side has already been done. How could this be?



My heart started to race. Did they? They couldn't have. I checked another side, it was all red. I checked another side, it was all white. Oh…my…God, my roommates completed a Rubik's cube! I looked at the perfectly organized colors on the cube, and it was the most beautiful thing I have ever seen.

I was filled with emotion. Every emotion that a body can feel, I felt. I was amazed, happy, jealous, angry, sad, tired, confused all at the same time. I dropped the Rubik's cube. It fell in slow motion onto the floor, landing with a great explosion. Kaboom!

I just sat there, mouth gaping wide open. How in the name of Zeus did my roommates pull this off? Why didn't anybody call me? I should have been there for that. I felt completely ostracized. Just then, my roommate Rick walked out of his bedroom. I was alert like a baseball player before a big game, I stood up and got in Rick's face. "What the hell is this, man!?" I showed him the Rubik's cube.

"Oh yeah!" His face lit up, "Pete and I did it yesterday. It took us, like, three hours."

"How did you do it? Why didn't you call me? This is like a big deal, dude. I don't think anybody has actually done this before."

"Yeah, I know. We used the Internet and just figured it out. It was so annoying to do certain things, like moving something that was here (he pointed at a spot on the Rubik's cube) to here. That took us, like, thirty moves."

"This is such crap. Why didn't you notify me? You should have called. I feel like fighting you right now. How could you have left me out of this?"

"We just forgot, I guess."

"Well, either way, I am very impressed. I think I am going to write about this in my column this week. I am going to pretend like I was there, though. In fact, every time you tell this story to someone, you have to include me in the story. I can't go through life telling people that my roommates figured out a Rubik's cube when I wasn't there."

"Whatever, man." He had a big grin on his face. At this point, Pete, my other roommate, walked out of his bedroom. He looked at me, then looked at the cube, and then smiled. "Did Rick tell you everything?"

"Yes," I said. "He told me everything. I'm so pissed, man."

"Yeah, it had to be done. It was such a pain taking the thing apart, though."

"No, Pete! I didn't tell him!" Rick shouted.

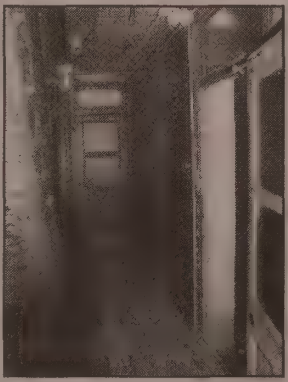
"You took it apart?" I was ready to kill.

"Oh, man! Pete, I had him! I had him!"

When In Manhattan...

Remembering the Tenements

Some people in the Hamptons might say that without a half a million dollars, you can't buy even the worst of dives to call home and start a life. I've spoken about how lucky we are to live here in this column before, and while that's true, the East End is a tough place to get started. In the nineteenth century in Manhattan, thousands of immigrants were also trying to start their lives. Instead of worrying about getting a house near the village or the water, the people had to think about survival for their family in not only a new home or city, but also a new country. The Lower East Side was considered the gateway to America at the time, and immigrants from across the globe found their way into large residential buildings with only the basic amenities that were erected for the sole purpose of housing them. These were the tenements of lower Manhattan.



Some of them have been kept and restored after more modern storefronts and buildings had their historic roots excavated from beneath their newer veneer. The Lower East Side is constantly changing. In just the last 10 years, hip bars and shops have slowly woven a presence into neighborhoods that once only held classic mom-and-pop business like those of the classic Garment District on Orchard Street, below Houston. With all this conversion, efforts were made to keep a reminder of what once was. The Lower East Side Tenement Museum is the product of these efforts, and makes an excellent destination for anyone who wants a look at old New York and the history and significance of the immigrants that started there.

The museum states their mission as follows: to promote tolerance and historical perspective through the presentation and interpretation of the variety of immigrant and migrant experiences on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

The mainstay of the Museum's programs is its flagship tenement building at 97 Orchard Street. The structure, built in 1863, is the first homestead of urban, working class, poor and immigrant people preserved in the United States. Guided tours are offered of several apartments showing the living conditions from the different eras of its existence. The homes tell the stories of the families that struggled against all odds to make their way in America. The impact of economic depressions and hard times are illustrated through the apartments of four families. The Gumpertz family in the 1870s, the Baldizzis in the 1930s, the Levines from the 1890s, and the Rogarshevskys from around 1910, are shown as integral connections to the area, the city, and the Nation's garment industry. One apartment remains not restored and brings to life the 19th century reform movement's campaign for improved housing. The tenements began without gas for light and heat, indoor toilets, and running water. In 1867, the city began passing legislation to improve conditions in the ailing buildings. The new housing laws prompted the landlord of 97 Orchard Street to remedy these problems. By the dawn of the 20th century, he had also transformed the building's entryway with tile floors, burlap wall coverings, pressed metal ceilings and oil paintings. The laws also called for more air and light in the apartments. Disgruntled landlords eventually complied by cutting windows in the walls that connected rooms in the apartments. It was no picnic, but progress prevailed.

The Lower East Side Tenement Museum offers a number of programs to promote tolerance and awareness of the plight of immigrants in the United States. A large variety of art, talks, and films are constantly changing and provide many views and aspects of this engaging and difficult subject including increased exposure of issues concerning Arab Americans in today's climate. Over the next five years, with the help the National Park Service, the Tenement Museum will make vast improvements to respond to increased public demand. A complete restoration of 97 Orchard Street, the establishment of the museum's first endowment, and expansion of facilities are but a few of the planned improvements. For a schedule of events and lectures check www.tenement.org.

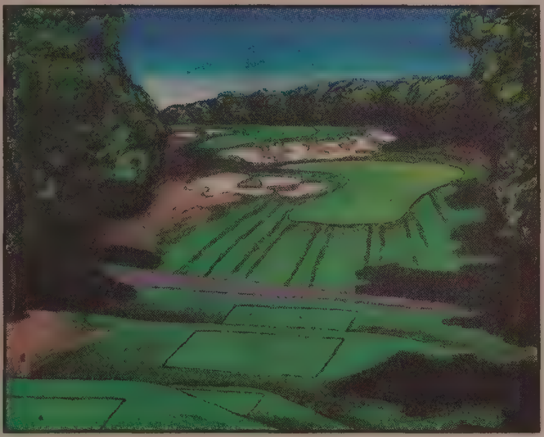
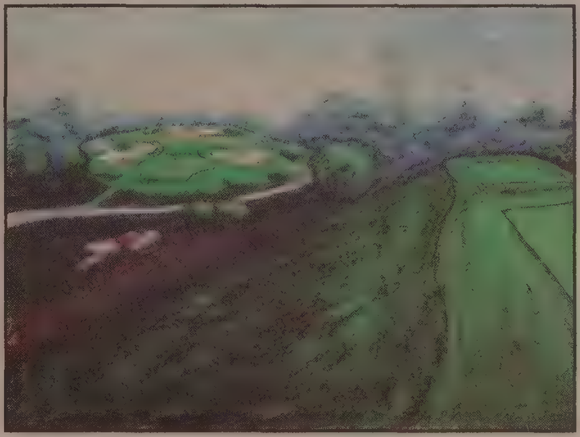
A Passion For Painting And Pars

On the way out to Montauk, Estia's Cantina in Amagansett has become a necessary stop for good food, good coffee, and good art. The restaurant has been showing local artists' work for years. Right now, you can find golf paintings and drawings by Adam Smith. It's a worthy destination for any golfer or art lover. The show consists of 20 pieces, most of which are from Smith's new series of works chronicling the holes of our great East End golf courses. A golfer longer than a painter, Smith has had a passion for the game he's played since childhood, and it blends well with his commitment to art, now marked by 16 years of dedicated application. He received his MFA from the San Francisco Art Institute in 1999, but Smith is a New Yorker who has been coming to the Hamptons, to what he calls the golf "mecca and paradise" where golf originated in the U.S., most of his life. He'll be the first to tell you that while he's not a bad golfer, he's a much better painter. Shooting a 90-100 at Montauk doesn't seem so bad to this novice, but Smith wants more.



Bethpage "Black" Hole 00#4



Montauk Downs Hole #12

Each landscape is snapped on a digital camera he takes with him on every golf outing, with the goal of capturing a photograph of the best vantage point of each hole, and then painting an image that offers an opportunity for viewers to actually think about what club they'd use and what shot they would hit, if they were right there, right then. Golfers Smith has spoken to are all quick to reminisce about favorite holes and their best Eagles or chip-ins, and it is this sort of enthusiasm that he caters to. Paintings are rendered from Shinnecock, National, Maidstone, Atlantic, and Montauk Downs, where Smith usually plays his game.

In fact, Montauk Downs is where it all started for the artist. While playing the course, Smith put another bogey on his scorecard, and then noticed the small illustration that adorned it. He had already been painting his surrealist landscapes for years, but it was one of those moments where something clicks. Why not combine his two passions? He looked at the illustration some more and pondered how he'd replace it. After the game he brought the idea to Kevin Smith, the head pro, and while he didn't get an exact affirmative, he was given motivation to try. Soon, Adam Smith was showing his art at the pro shop, and more recently, the new clubhouse bar. As of yet, the scorecard illustration remains in its original state, but his involvement with the golf course continues to grow.

Last August, Smith got involved with supporting The National Heritage Trust Foundation for the Montauk Downs. The foundation aims for the upkeep and renovation of one of the top 25 public courses in the nation. As the Downs is a state-run course, the money is not always as readily available as it might be for the private clubs like Maidstone and Shinnecock, where this year's U.S. Open tees off in June. The NHTF has managed to gain the help of the illustrious golf architect, Rees "U.S. Open Doctor" Jones, pro bono, for the renovations needed to make Montauk Downs a championship course, like he did for Bethpage " Black" a few years ago. Bethpage "Black" is another great public course on Long Island that is run by the state.

It is a new and brilliant concept to host the big events on a course where regular folk, without a huge wallet or an elite background, but who love the game, can get a chance to swing as the pros do. They called the 2002 U.S. Open at Bethpage "the People's Open," for a reason. But, even with Jones giving his services for free, there are the huge costs of upgrading and improving the course. Each year, Montauk Downs hosts a gala event with a tournament and party to support the cause. Smith's golf paintings were auctioned at last summer's party, with a portion of the cost benefiting the foundation. It was a success, and this year he will do it again. The gala will take place on August 21, 2004.

Adam Smith's golf paintings are on view at Estia's in Amagansett from May 12-July 14, with a reception on June 13th from 4-5:30 p.m. The artist will also be showing golf works at Bobby Van's in Bridgehampton from June 1-July 31st, and he is on permanent view at the Montauk Downs clubhouse. All paintings are for sale; one third of the proceeds from all clubhouse sales go towards the renovation. Smith's website is www.adamsmithart.com.

GOLF GUIDE

My Afternoon at Poxabogue

On Saturday, I went to Poxabogue Golf Center. Now, mind you, I don't play golf. I don't want to play golf. I am too impatient. I would be the one banging his golf club on the ground. But I went there anyway, because I volunteered to write an article for this paper about Poxabogue. I figured I would eat at the restaurant and report on the percentage of players who looked unhappy about their golf game. I also planned to order many different dishes so I could recommend what golf widows should eat while waiting for their husbands to make their 53rd swing of the day to sink their putts at the 9th hole. (Women golfers, please do not send letters.) But after negotiating the very small, poorly laid out and confusing parking lot, I discovered that the restaurant was closed, so I decided to walk around instead.

The driving range

In case you missed the news, the Towns of East Hampton and Southampton bought Poxabogue to preserve it as one of the few public golf courses on the East End. The prior owners had planned to subdivide the site and build houses. Poxabogue lies on 40 acres on the border of Sagaponack and Wainscott, just east of Wölffer Vineyards on Route 27/Montauk Highway. For those interested in more than just the restaurant, Poxabogue offers a nine-hole, 30-par, 1583-yard golf course consisting of three par-4 holes and six par-3 holes, ranging from 62 yards to 304 yards, as well as a 75-station driving range which includes a practice putting green and even practice sand bunkers.

I first visited the driving range stations, many of which were in use. Balls for the driving range are rented from a machine that takes special tokens. One token costs $8; multiple tokens cost under $8 each. A token entitles you to 55 balls. Each station is well marked and seems to be separated from the next station enough so people are not on top of each other, but not nearly enough for bad players to avoid embarrassment. I think people would pay much more than $8 to use a driving station that cannot be seen by anyone else. Given that the Towns must pay down loans taken out to acquire Poxabogue, I suggest they consider offering high-cost private driving-range stations.

I next went to the putting green and sand bunkers, but no one was practicing. I am not surprised that no one was practicing at the sand bunkers, because to do so is to advertise that you cannot drive the ball in a straight line. While there were certainly people at the driving range who suffered this impediment, they blended in much better than they would were they to stand alone haplessly whacking at a ball in a sand bunker.

Finally, although I was not permitted to walk the course (each person on the course must carry a set of golf clubs), I did walk over to the first and ninth holes. While the course lacks the ultra-manicured look favored at many golf courses, the people playing seemed to be frustrated only by their own game. During the summer season, greens fees range from $25 to $50, depending on the day of the week and the time. Poxabogue also has a pro shop and a variety of lesson packages for adults and children. If you visit www.Poxabogue.com, you can print a voucher for a 10% discount at the pro shop.

One reason Poxabogue may appear less manicured is that it utilizes environmentally sound practices, and has been recognized by the Audubon Society as a "Certified Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary". This is a nice thing, but I should tell you that I saw what might have been – and I am no expert on birds – a piping plover. So, golfers be warned! If you swing a golf club anywhere near the endangered piping plover, not only will your golf clubs be confiscated by a gaggle of federal, state, county and town agents, but you will be sentenced to an added handicap of five to ten swings. (No piping plovers were harmed in the preparation of this report.)

From the NY Times, Mrs. JoAnne Starkey says:
"Mr. Guy Peuch's crab cakes are legendary, perhaps the best on Long Island."

From Newsday, Mr. Peter Gianotti says:
"It's easily the most impressive restauant to open in Riverhead since potatoes began giving way to grapes! Excellent main course; pork chop finishes with nubbins of garlic and sage. Also first rate, the Niman Ranch dry-rubbed rib steak. Top desserts: lemon tart, tart tatin and chocolate-hazelnut puck."

From Dan's Papers, Mr. Roy Bradbrook says:
"Probably the best lobster bisque we have ever tasted; pate with pistachio and truffles was superb, vibrant duck a l'orange with some incredible wild rice, impressive desserts. Guy Feuch is among the very top tier chefs in this region."

Your View Of History 104th U.S. Open

On a clear and blustery day I hit my approach shot to the 16th green at Shinnecock. The ball landed on the green, 25 feet from the pin. I walked slowly up to the green, taking in the greatest golfing experience of my life. One of the caddies was telling us stories about what happened to the greats on each hole. "This is what Trevino said on the 11th. Right here is where 10,000 people helped Nicklaus search in vain for his ball on the 10th." As I reached the green I looked out over the course. I could see the shimmering water to the south and the windmill of the older National Course to the right. I wanted it to last forever. I finally reached down to mark my ball. It was gone! I looked over to see my playing partner, Vince, laughing. "Why didn't you run up and mark your ball?" he said. I couldn't explain that I was caught up in the moment.

"Where is it?" I asked.

"The wind blew it down into the gully," he said.

Now as a spectator heading to the Open, at Shinnecock from June 17- 20, I will share with you the lesson I gained from playing here just once. Know your spot and get there quick! There will be 35,000 other people each day trying to get the best vantage point before you. There are four categories that golf spectators fall into. Knowing where you stand might help you find the best seat.

Setting up at Shinnecock

BLEACHER BUM: These are the people who arrive earliest, pick a spot in the grand stand and do not move. They are planted from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. and would rather die of thirst than have to take that break and lose their seat.

WANDERING HERD: You pick a player and slowly walk with the crowd. If you are 6'10" or taller this may work for you, but for most it is the weakest vantage point. It's truly for the ones who want to say they walked with Tiger, although they will rarely see him.

FAIRWAY FRINGER: These are the guys you see who calculate where an errant shot might land, and chase a ball bounding out of bounds. They stand just behind the ball and put their elbows out to define the front of the new line. This often gives you a long, up-close look at a pro who is figuring out how to hit the shot, and a chance to witness greatness. The downside is you can't follow the player onto the fairway to see where the shot ends up.

PAR THREE PERSNICKETY: For the guy who wants it all in one small package. You can watch the tee shot, the bunker shot, the putts, and just maybe a hole in one.

Recommended Seating: Steve Worthy, Director of U.S. Open Operations, says that this open is much more fan friendly than the last. There will be 21,000 grand stand seats compared to 12,000. Steve says that one of the best seats in the house are the stands along the 16th and 17th fairways. "From these seats you can see the action on the 16th, 17th, and even watch players tee off from the 18th!"

GETTING THERE BY CAR: Go to Gabreski Airport in Westhampton Beach (Exit 63) off Rt. 27 (Sunrise Hwy), where shuttle buses will bring in spectators.

GETTING THERE BY TRAIN: The MTA LIRR has provided special service for the 2004 U.S. Open with a new Shinnecock Hills stop built for the event.

For up to the minute times check the LIRR stations. For special U.S. Open brochures or consult the LIRR's website at www.mta.info.

Author's Note: If in your travels on the 10th fairway you happen upon an old Titleist with the Initials RS, please drop it back into the high grass. That ball is the only thing I share in common with the great Mr. Nicklaus at Shinnecock. Hoping your view is unforgettable.

Golf, Glorious Golf

Winter is the snowbirds' season, but no golfer can help but love the summer. After months of snows and rains and frosts, it's a relief to look at trees turning green with fresh new leaves and bright new colors. And, if you're like me, the smell of freshly cut grass can only mean one thing: it's time to tee up! So lace up your spikes, wipe down your grips, get focused, and prepare to confront your inner demons... over 18 holes of golf, glorious golf.

Here in the Hamptons, where we sit between the Great Peconic Bay to our north and the deep blue Atlantic to our south, we are welcoming summer more joyfully than usual. The PGA Tour is coming to town and I'm dreaming shots, longing to play.

This June we welcome the world's best players to our area as the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club plays host to the 104th United States Open Championship. It's four days of walking over hot coals for most and a life-altering experience for the winner. It's like being knighted; for the rest of the winner's life, he will be introduced in the following manner: "Ladies and gentleman," barks the first tee announcer, "please welcome on the first tee from anytown, anywhere, the 104th United States Open Champion, Mr. _______."

I guess I hold the view that this is the best of the four major championships, if only for the fact that it's an "open" competition, which means anyone can enter providing they first have the game (2-handicap or less if you're an amateur), and second, the nerve to survive two rather intense qualifying tournaments... one local and one regional. After that, if you were born to play, you might write yourself into legend on a windy day at the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club.

The good news is that dreams do, on occasion, come true. Francis Quimet, for example, won the 1913 US Open as a 17-year old amateur by beating the two greatest players of the day, Edward Ray and Harry Vardon. Then there was local club pro, Sam Parks, winning at Oakmont in '35 and Jack Fleck beating the Ice Man, Ben Hogan, in '55 at the Olympic Club. In more recent memory, you might recall a smiling, fast-talking, weird-swinging Mexican/American named Lee Trevino who blistered the Oak Hill Country Club in a record 275 strokes. Now, no one north of El Paso and Raymond Floyd (that's another story) had ever heard of "The Merry Mex" before he smoked the field in '68. So, you see, it's happened before, and I guess that means it can happen again.

The bad news for dreamers is that out beyond the tall grass, out where the big cats roam, there lurk some very hungry animals, and shh... don't shout this too loudly, but I know of one "Tiger" that hasn't fed in some time now. In other words, you can dream of immortality, but you had better come up with your cleats sharpened and something to prove: pretenders show up early and quickly disappear. I can imagine Phil and Tiger paired for the final 18; that would be very cool. If a local pro or amateur happened to be in the hunt late, it would be even more intoxicating. Happy though I am to be welcoming summer, I must also add a sad adieu. I will not be at Poxabogue to share the season with you. I want to congratulate the towns of Southampton and East Hampton for having the great wisdom to save this beloved facility – the Hamptons would not have been the same without it.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

For readers of my column it may seem odd that I offer a recipe for roast chicken and a hot soup at the dawn of the summer season. The fact is that I roast a chicken at least every 10 days or so simply because we love it as well as the rewards of leftovers. By leftovers, I don't mean just eating cold chicken the next day, but taking carefully trimmed pieces to prepare a curried chicken salad for a quick lunch or most intentionally, to use the roasted carcass – with some leftover vegetables that too often find their way into the garbage bin – to make a stock.

Since I am mostly cooking for two and will be left with at least half the chicken and the carcass, I'll carve the rest of the meat from the bones to add to a 5-6 quart soup pot along with the carcass and any giblets that may or may not be included in the chicken's cavity. (Never include the liver when making a stock or you will destroy it.) Just look into your refrigerator crisper and you're sure to find a carrot or two, a couple of ribs of celery and some parsley sprigs, and you have the beginnings of a stock. To this, add a small onion or leek greens, a bay leaf and a few peppercorns. Add water to cover everything and let simmer away for a couple of hours. You should have enough liquid to make the rice and sweet pea recipe below – a fine soup to enjoy for these transitional days.

Best of all I have cleared out the fridge to make room for summer's inspirations – and the satisfying knowledge that I have economized which in no way affects skill in the preparation of food.

BASIC ROAST CHICKEN

Roasting a whole chicken is one of the most basic of all cooking techniques and the rewards are many.
Serves 2-4

1 3-3 1/2 lb whole chicken
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2-3 tablespoons minced fresh herbs, parsley, thyme and/or rosemary
2-3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2-3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1/2 cup water or chicken broth

1.Purchase the freshest and best quality chicken you have access to. Remove any giblets from the chicken's cavity and wash it thoroughly inside and out. Dry well with paper towels. If you can, slide your hand under the skin of the chicken over both sides of the breast, if not don't bother. Season the chicken with a sprinkle of salt and pepper.

2.Mix the herbs in a small bowl with lemon juice, oil and salt and pepper. Spoon the mixture under the skin or over it and into the cavity of the chicken.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees

3.If possible, truss the chicken with kitchen string; if not, just put it on a rack in a roasting pan not much larger than the chicken. Add water or stock to pan and roast breast-side up on middle rack for 20 minutes. Baste chicken with pan juices and return to oven breast side down. Roast another 15-20 minutes and turn and baste again. Roast 15-20 minutes longer until skin is golden brown. Transfer to a carving board and let rest for a few minutes before carving. Carve the leg and thigh bone from each side of the chicken first, then the wing with a portion of the breast meat, and finally carve the white breast meat off the carcass, like a turkey, in half inch slices. Reserve the carcass for making stock. If there is some pink at the bone around the thigh or leg put them back in the roasting pan with pan juices and simmer over a burner to cook for a few minutes longer. Reserve pan juices to serve with the chicken.

SPRING RICE AND PEA SOUP

Makes 6 servings

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 bunch scallions, trimmed and thinly sliced
3-4 ribs celery, trimmed and thinly sliced and diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
6 cups chicken stock or canned low-sodium broth
1/2 cup medium-grain rice
1 cup frozen baby peas
Coarsely chopped celery leaves for garnish, optional

1.Heat olive oil with butter in large saucepan and, when sizzling, put in the scallions and celery. Sauté the vegetables for 3-4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the stock or broth and bring to the edge of a boil. Season with salt and pepper to taste judiciously (even low-sodium broth may taste a bit salty). Put in the rice and simmer, maintaining a lazy surface bubble, about 20 minutes. Add the peas and cook about 5 minutes longer. Taste for seasoning and adjust as necessary. Garnish with celery leaves, if desired, and serve warm.

Silvia Lehrer will teach 3 hands-on Evening Cooking Classes – International Summer Buffet, June 3; Taste of Italy in Summer, June 10; The Asian Grill, June 17. Classes are held in a professional kitchen in Water Mill. Call (631) 537 7831 for detailed schedule.

Dining in the Hamptons

Potluck Dinner, Hamptons Style

It's hardly a tidal wave, but it's more than a ripple. The potluck dinner is on the scene, as Hamptonites look to the past to find new ways to entertain or be entertained while dining in as well as dining out, two of the most overwhelming decisions we face daily. Don't think it isn't. Witness all the attention that eating gets in the media, with one whole section of the New York Times devoted to the subject every week, plus the Food Network, plus, plus, plus.

So what is a potluck dinner, anyway? And where did it begin? Merriam-Webster says it's a "communal meal in which people bring food to share." Its beginnings? Maybe it started when one cave dweller, male, with an eye on one of the occupants, female, of a neighboring hole-in-the-rock, suggested to his own cavemate that they ask those people up the rockface to come for dinner, and bring over some of whatever she was cooking – you know, just to vary the menu a bit. Whatever the motive, the idea of meal-sharing across family units has been with the human race forever.

On with the history lesson. Back in the '30s, the nineteen thirties, when going out to dinner was a real big Depression-era thing, the potluck dinner, often as not under church auspices, was where it happened. Today, amid loud devotions to the gods of conspicuous consumption, food and eating have been raised almost to religious levels (see Atkins, e.g.). Enter the pot luck dinner, the born-again, eat-in, phenomenon that has taken on new dimensions, and a new cachet, accent on the "cash," re-emerging in the Hamptons in a time of plenty.

What's for the potluck dinner? Anything your friends or neighbors agree to bring. But this is the Hamptons and we're not talking "you bring the hot dogs," and "you bring the burgers," and "I've got a green bean cheez-whiz casserole in the freezer." Uh, uh. According to Steve Haweeli, publicist for a number of East Hampton eateries, "there isn't a restaurant on the East End that doesn't have a take-out menu."

Call up Della Femina and ask for their roast chicken to go, and you can pick it up in half an hour. Try Turtle Crossing for ribs, chicken or duck. Or the salsa and chips from La Fondita, or the Caesar salad from Nick & Toni's, or the macaroni and cheese from Almond, and pastries from Citarella. And on and on…to say nothing of the scores of caterers, all over the Hamptons. Just check the Yellow Pages for names and phone numbers – and menus from the restaurants, too. Or go on-line, even order on line. Among the many caterers tried and true, there's Food & Company, Claws on Wheels, Stuarts, Brent Newsom, Janet O'Brien and while you're at it ask around for those who may be "hot" and new. In general, for short lead-time orders to-go, count on the restaurants….caterers are not as quick to come through on a last minute or even week-ahead decision to try their pot luck. Whichever way you go, however, they're all on hand for plain and fancy do's for those who don't want to light a grill or mix a salad. As for the go-with beverages there are vineyards a-plenty and bottlings galore to choose from. Check out Bedell Cellars, Duck Walk, Channing Daughters, Wolffers, if you're into the local wineries. And "wine not." (Sorry about that.)

Potluck dinners have a few other things going for them. First, you can hear your guests, when they have something to say. Second, no wait to be seated, reservations or not. Third, you've got a chance to get to know the people you're socializing with, for better or worse. At least you didn't have to break the bank to find out you really didn't like them!

Orchestrating a potluck affair, Hamptons style, is of course the job of the host or hostess, who should make an effort to keep the contributions fair and equal. And, if they've picked the right guests, doing the dishes will be no problem.

Something else will be no problem. There'll be no raised eyebrows because there'll be no "splitting the check" three ways, sometimes more, and no after-dinner qvetches about "she had the filet," and "I only ordered the grilled chicken breast!"

Dining in the Hamptons

Veteran East End restauranteur David Loewenberg has teamed up with Michael Nolan to open Fresno (8 Fresno Place in East Hampton, 324-8700). The location, on the outskirts of the village of East Hampton, was most recently Santa Fe Junction and once housed the very popular Fresno Place, a restaurant that helped redefine the Hamptons palate back in the early 90s. The executive chef is John Yashinowsky, who most recently was the chef/owner at Gianni's Bar & Grill in Montauk and prior to that at the critically acclaimed Caswell's, also in Montauk. Look for apps in the $7 - $14 ranges (like lobster & crab ravioli); and entrees like roast Long Island duck breast with sugar snaps, wild rice and dried cherry sauce in the $19 - $32 range. Go now, before you can't get in.

Down the road at East Hampton's Jean-Luc East: there's now a full raw bar as well as summer à la carte farmer's Sunday brunch. Call 631-324-1100 for more info and reservations.

This just in: no Taste of the Hamptons this year, alas. The annual food and drink event that raised money for the Family Service League of Suffolk County – a fabulous group by the way – just can't handle all the rigamarole and high prices of putting an event on out here. It was essentially the granddaddy of all food and wine events. C'est la guerre.

What we can tell you is that Chefs & Champagne (benefits the James Beard House) will be on July 24th at Wolffer.

How sweet it is (and delicious, too)! Those in the know will be sipping the latest liquor de jour – Marti Autentico Mojito. This premium rum is flavored with mint and lime and is the perfect elixir to flavor up summer. Look for tasty concoctions starring Marti Autentico at all of your favorite haunts. Bottoms up.

Long Island fishermen netted a big catch with the upcoming Pride of New York Seafood campaign, which kicked off on May 15 at Gosman's Restaurant in Montauk. New York State Commissioner Rudgers, Congressman Bishop, Suffolk County Legislator Jay Schneiderman, Suffolk County Legislator Michael Carraciolo and New York State Assemblyman Fred Thiele were on hand to inaugurate the event. The campaign enlists the participation of East End restaurants, retail seafood shops and wholesale fish market, to help raise visibility and promote the freshness and packed-at-sea-quality standards for which New York's seafood is known. Early restaurants on board include The Laundry (East Hampton), The Seafood Barge (Southold), The Clam Bar (Napeague Stretch), Breakwater Café (Montauk) and Plaza Café (Southampton). As Long Island Commercial Fishing Association's Executive Director Bonnie Brady says, "Be sure to ask your server what's locally caught tonight!"

Speaking of seafood, Capt. Phil announces the reopening of East End Clambakes on Friday, May 21st. East End Clambakes Seafood takeout restaurant is located 1 mile east of Southampton College across from the Elks club on County Road 39 in Southampton. Famous for their clambakes, homemade chowders and large variety of fresh seafood, they will this year be offering pasta dishes such as Mussels Marinara, Lobster Marinara and Shrimp Marinara. Then there are the famous lobster rolls, softshell crabs, steamers, clams, flounder, seared tuna, and more. Store hours will be 7 days a week, 11 a.m. - 9 p.m. Sunday thru Thursday and will stay open until 10 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. Takeout phone number is 631-726-5360.

Going to the new Target? Stonewalls in Riverhead offers a Sunday brunch for $21 per person with a complimentary drink from 12 noon to 4 p.m., plus two prix fixe dinner specials Wednesday through Monday. Call 506-0777 for details.

Mirko's Restaurant

Water Mill Square
631-726-4444

What can be said about Mirko's, the gorgeous restaurant tucked away in the Water Mill Square, that hasn't been said already in rave reviews in Zagat's, The New York Times, or New York Magazine? Well, I don't think I've yet read, "Just so you know, that is probably one of the best things I've ever tasted in my whole life." That was my husband, after his late night snack of an appetizer portion of Croatian Stuffed Cabbage. We took the cabbage to go, because we couldn't resist after Eileen, co-owner and wife of Chef Mirko Zagar, told us that clients order to go all the time (even going so far as to buy the cabbage in single-serving sized portions and freezing it at home for the winter). We had intended, of course, to save it for another day – a day when we had not just finished a four course, three dessert meal at one of the Hampton's loveliest restaurants. But someone couldn't wait.

We had begun the evening in a typical high-stress, weeknight manner, and we were late for our reservation. No matter. Eileen, always the consummate hostess, immediately relaxed us with a cozy table and a few amusing anecdotes about life in the Hamptons restaurant world. She and her husband have been in this charming location, slightly away from the hustle and bustle, but centrally located enough to be found by Benjamin Netanyahu, Colin Powell, Anne Bancroft and many mere mortals with experienced palates and high expectations, for twenty years. Once you've enjoyed one meal at Mirko's, you will know why, after so long, it is still almost impossible to get a reservation during the season, unless you want to eat at 6 p.m. or 9 p.m. Try anyway, and trust me, it's worth it.

We started with jumbo lump crab cakes, all crabmeat and almost no "cake" if you will, exactly the way you want them, served with an orange fennel salad dressed with orange basil oil. The burst of citrus both in the dressing and in the supremes, combine with spice of the fennel to add great dimension. We also had the pan seared calamari, flash sauteed with lemon, garlic and sherry wine sauce. Excellent, with a slightly charred taste and a texture that fell somewhere between soft and firm. Calamari lovers like myself will understand this assessment. I must mention too that we shared the portobello mushroom "pizza," which is a grilled mushroom, lightly coated in cornmeal and covered with goat cheese, caramelized onions and fresh tomatoes. It was hard to imagine the entrees had yet to arrive.

But I cannot forget the salads. We tasted two – the baby arugula, endive and radicchio salad with goat cheese morsels, and the baby field greens with Gorgonzola, roasted beet and pecans. Yes, they were as good as they sound, with the freshest greens, tangiest cheeses and complimentary dressings.

And then, the main course. I had pistachio crusted red snapper, served with an orange and watercress salad, caramelized onions and an aged balsamic, which had moved gracefully from vinegar to sauce. The fish was delicate, moist and light, no small feat when crusted with nuts, and again, the accompaniments offered a welcome balance, with crunch, spice, and tang.

My husband is the meat-eater at our table, and he tried the herb roasted pork tenderloin, served with an elegant apple compote and charred tomatoes in a balsamic sage sauce. The pork was juicy and tender, and the fruit and vegetables again hit perfect pitch. Although we were told that Mirko doesn't often repeat ingredients on the same menu in any given week, our two entrees demanded the complexity of fine balsamic and were delicious because of it.

At this point, I should talk a bit about the establishment itself, though it is difficult to tear myself away from my culinary reminiscence. The dining room embraces you with European charm, candlelight and warm yellow walls, with tasteful accents. There is a quaint, softly lit bar room with several small tables, an outside patio that is covered with a plastic tent in the fall, filled with heaters and happy, romantic diners, and spring and summertime dining set up in the charming brick courtyard, where the tables are watched over by a large and luscious cherry tree (in full bloom right now), and hundreds of glowing, white lights.

The menu changes slightly as the year progresses, incorporating tons of fresh herbs from Mirko's herb garden, along with local tomatoes and other irresistible ingredients that the East End is known for. We believe Eileen when she says that "We'd like to change the menu more often, but the regulars would throw a fit."

We couldn't decide what to do next. We were moving in slow motion at this point, stuffed beyond reason, but our instincts told us dessert was not to be missed. So we really went for it, ordering the warm, dense apple & blackberry crisp and an apple pecan cake. Both were served with ice cream, vanilla and cinnamon respectively, and the cake floated in caramel sauce. But the cherry on top, as they say, was the dessert Eileen sent without warning. All evening we had watched her move from table to table, sitting for a moment to catch up with those she knew, introducing herself and wishing a happy fiftieth wedding anniversary to a couple of newcomers, all the while checking their meals with her perfectionist's eye. When she noticed that we had not ordered the caramelized oranges with Grand Marnier, served in a large footed bowl with vanilla ice cream, she sent one over. The oranges were glazed with the liqueur, chilled to a dense texture and draped over slightly melting rich, rich French vanilla ice cream. Wow.

The wine list is extensive, and the by-the-glass selections of red and white run from $8.50 to $11.75 Appetizers range from $13.25 to $15.50, and entrees from $22.95 to $34.95. Mirko's is currently open for dinner, Thursday through Sunday.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

Erika's Fashions "In The Hamptons" are a medley of unique fashions for the contemporary woman. The shop just celebrated its Grand Opening last Saturday, May 15, at 7 Ponquogue Avenue in Hampton Bays, in a newly renovated store that was formerly known as Purrfect Liquors.

After twenty-seven years of doing business in Center Moriches, the storeowner, Cindy Berding, decided to migrate a little further east to the charming beach town of Hampton Bays. She is confident that her loyal clientele will follow her there, and is very excited of the prospect of establishing a whole new customer base.

Erika's Fashions is stocked to the hilt with all the latest modern 2004 looks, and is proud of the fact that she has an outfit for any occasion. Along with casual weekend wear, Erika's carries career wear and special occasion dresses with all the jewelry, handbags and shoes to match. Yes, there are also lots and lots of shoes, which were sorely needed in Hampton Bays.

Erika's Fashions will be open seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and for your shopping convenience, Friday and Saturday nights until 8 p.m. Layaways and gift wrapping are also available and major credit cards are accepted. For information call Erika's "In The Hamptons" at 631-728-4853.

Into the fickle and quirky fashion/salon business of the Hamptons comes a young, updated and positive colorist, stylist and custom haircutter, Marie Markowski, who happens to be a native of the East End. Formerly of Scott J. Aveeda Lifestyle Salon and Spa in Bridgehampton, she is now on staff at Studio Salon located on West Main Street in Southampton. Marie was educated and worked with organic products for over three years, which motivated her to find more purifying, updated information in maintaining the quality of hair. "I can see whether a client has way too much metal residue and build-up in the hair from the toxic everyday impurities," she stated. "Studio Salon's 'Pureology' products are not only organic, but also 100% vegan, sulfate-free and extremely gentle, with an aromatherapy scent. I recommend shampoos and conditioners for my clients that have just the right level of ph for healthier, shinier hair."

At the Studio Salon, her new home, Marie Markowski brings her knowledge, positive energy, and those lovely Hamptons beachy highlighting ideas for all to enjoy! For information and appointments call Marie at 631-283-8656.

Shellie Goldstein, M.S.,L.Ac., Licensed Aesthetician, has just started her brand new Hamptons practice in both Acupuncture and Aesthetics, located at McMahon Medical Center, 518 Montauk Highway in Amagansett.

Ms. Goldstein is New York State licensed in acupuncture since 1991 and aesthetics since 2000. One of the services that she provides is the "AcuFacial," which is a registered name and a service that she herself created. AcuFacial is a "facial-lift" technique that is designed to improve facial appearance, lift sagging skin, reduce fine lines and wrinkles, and leave you feeling relaxed and radiant. Based upon the ancient wisdom of Chinese medicine and modern skin care technology, AcuFacial provides an affordable, non-invasive facial lift that strengthens and improves skin appearance. The procedure also firms eye tissue, reduces puffiness, and minimizes double chins, as well as maintains healthy, youthful skin by improving skin tone and color.

"Acupuncture as an alternative to cosmetic surgery, botox and collagen, and has gained significant attention in the past year. It has been a topic of many magazines, journals and even Channel 2's 11 o' clock news," Shellie explained. "Acupuncture also treats allergies, digestive disorders, fatigue, stress and stress-related anxiety illnesses, respiratory difficulties, menstrual and reproductive imbalances, and urogenital disorders. It enables the body and the mind to reestablish balance and maintain a positive attitude toward health and wellness," she added.

For further information and appointments, call Shellie Goldstein at 631-219-3226.

because these statistics are shared with land managers in order to justify further expenditures for trails initiatives and land preservation on Long Island.

If you have any medical problems that may limit your ability to hike, or just aren't sure if you're in good enough shape to keep up, raise these issues with the hike leader before the hike. Hike leaders always try to appoint a "sweep" on a hike. This person will be last in line in order to keep an eye on the slower hikers. He or she should be familiar with the trail. Sometimes the only experienced hiker on the hike is the leader himself. In this case, he will set up a buddy system, a two-way radio, or make some other effort to insure that no one becomes separated from the group. Never leave the group without notifying the hike leader. I remember one very hot day when I was helping a hike leader search the woods for two hikers who dropped out of the hike early. We later met this couple as they strolled back to their car after they had gotten some hamburgers at the local Burger King. We would have been spared searching for the "lost" hikers if only they had notified the hike leader before leaving the group.

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would you like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website at www.hike-li.org

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

Behind the Lines

Last time my Mum came to visit, she brought me a present. I was thrilled when she rifled through her bag to retrieve it – at first, that is. But when she handed me, with gleeful flourish, a tube of StriVectin-SD, I was confused, to say the least. What was StriVectin-SD in its very non-descript looking package, anyway? Upon closer inspection, I discovered, to my absolute horror, that StriVectin-SD is, and I quote, "intensive repair for existing stretch marks." And it said it was "ultra concentrated," to boot. What was Mum trying to tell me?

Was she being cruel to be kind? I'm a size 2 – haven't yet had children – nor have I suddenly lost major amounts of weight and therefore have the need of stretch mark therapy, or was I, thus far, happily oblivious to something? But before Mum had the chance to tell me the reason for this, this...so called gift, the phone rang and I was left wondering. A couple of days later, after I'd almost had a nervous breakdown, she finally explained that she'd heard me complaining how I was, at 34 years young, beginning to get wrinkles and that StriVectin-SD was the new miracle cream that was going stop my crow's feet in their tracks. That sounds great. But was she aware that she'd just given me stretch mark cream, I asked? Turns out she was, convinced that this StriVectin was the new elixir that worked wonders on wrinkles, even, she boasted, as good as Botox. Yeah, right. I wasn't convinced. I was the beauty expert, not her. What did Mum know? Stretch mark therapy, indeed! But after doing a little more research, I discovered that she just might be on to something. By all accounts StriVectin- SD is flying off the shelves these days because of a simple fluke in market research. The story goes that studies for StriVectin-SD were being carried out and during the research participants were given a tube of the cream simply labeled "topical cream." Somehow the instructions for what to do with this cream became unclear and so people began to use it on their faces and, much to the surprise of Klein-Becker, StriVectin SD's exclusive distributor, began reporting breakthrough miracle results on fine lines and wrinkles. Before long, the word was out and StriVectin-SD was hailed the new wonder anti-aging cream. But how does it work and what is the appeal of such creams over new crazes like Botox?

Dr. Nathalie Cevereau says that, "Many researchers believe less invasive cosmetic alternatives are more effective than Botox. That's because "cosmeceutical" creams and gels offer gradual, continual results, while the effects of Botox and facial peels begin to wear off the very next day."

So if needles aren't your bag, you might want to get yourself a tube of StriVectin-SD. But act fast, because pharmacies are finding it hard to keep up with the demand for this $130 miracle elixir.

StriVectin-SD certainly seems like a great alternative to Botox, but I decided to look into a couple of other anti-wrinkle options, because let's face it – none of us is getting any younger.

Ever hear of frownies? Well, they've been around since 1889. Back before times of the scientific approach to age defying, Margaret Kroesen invented frownies, when noticing, like my Mum, that her daughter was developing wrinkles and frown lines. Frownies are an all-natural remedy for the aging process and one that has been used in Hollywood and with those in the public eye for over 100 years. Rene Russo is the latest poster girl for them, quoted in Good Housekeeping saying, "I have a really bad crease in my forehead. So I go to the drugstore, and get these things that have been around forever, called Frownies. They have adhesive on one side, like a glue. You lick that side, separate your crease, put it on the crease, and sleep with it. And the next morning you look better. I swear by them."

So, how do Frownies work? It's simple. They're little sticky tabs that you wear around your eyes and on your forehead while you're sleeping. While you snooze, the stickers pull back and retrain your muscles so that they're in an uplifted position. Remove the Frownies in the morning and after a few weeks, you'll only have to worry about smile lines. Now that's what I call getting some beauty sleep. Another reason to smile is that Frownies are only $16.99 for a box of 144 tabs. See www.frownies.com for more info.

DDF's Wrinkle Relax cream, $75, was first known as Faux Tox. This non-toxic cream contains an ingredient that actually blocks muscle contractions, those that happen when you move your face, therefore preventing lines before they even appear. It's never too late to start.

So if you're worried about getting older, before you go under needle or knife, try this week's suggestions. Taking care of wrinkles doesn't always have to be "cut" and dry.

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Potatohampton 2004

There are a lot of signs that summer is approaching: the pink petals littering Further Lane, the warmth of the sand under bare feet, and the hastening preparations for Memorial Day festivities. For the past twenty-six years, the Potatohampton Minithon 10K has been a tradition over Memorial Day Weekend. It's a chance to get out into the warming air, to whip your body into shape, and to run or walk for a good cause.

It all began in a February bilzzard in 1978 when an employee of the Sheriff's office suggested the idea to Dan Rattiner: a marathon. At first he was taken aback by the idea that he would be the one to sponsor such an athletic endeavor, at a time when platform shoes still dominated the scene and the eighties fitness craze was yet to descend, but he decided to go for it. That year, there were 368 joggers, and each one got an actual Hampton potato for participating. I wonder if any of those first joggers still have their potatoes. Let's hope not.

Dan's story from that issue of Dan's Papers retold the novelty of the first Potatohampton. In fact, from his point of view, people who endeavored to run were quite "looney." In an excerpt from that 1978 issue, Dan said that it was "a crazy thing. Here they are, four hundred looney people in tight pants, headbands, thirty dollar jogging shoes, and t-shirts that proclaim JOGGERS DO IT BETTER…" Wow, thirty dollar jogging shoes? That must have been a real splurge at the first Potatohampton. But now that exercise is all the rage, people in sweatbands and exercise suits aren't quite as silly and thirty dollars wouldn't even buy you one jogging shoe. But one thing remains: Potatohampton is still a staple in many people's Memorial Day traditions.

Through the years, Potatohampton has had its share of blue skies and rain. In 1997, for example, the 650 registered joggers splashed over the finish line under ominous skies. But the participation has been growing exponentially, rain or shine. By the year 2000, under sunny skies, there were tables set up where people handed out sample suntan lotion, there were masseuses and weight loss specialists.

The tradition continues as the race prepares for its 26th year. Little did Dan know that 26 years later people would still be kicking off the summer with the Potatohampton 10K. This year there will be tables where sponsors will be giving out fruit and water as well as information on activities that will be going on this summer. Since the first race, Potatohampton has gained sponsors including Shape, King Kullen, Cancos Tile, and the Hain Celestial Group, and has benefitted such noble causes as The American Cancer Society and Multiple Sclerosis.

This year's race is to benefit The Foundation for the Advancement of Cardiac Therapies (FACT). The founder of this organization is "Doc Hollywood" Mehmet Oz, M.D., and he will be participating in the event. FACT is a new charity that works to increase awareness about cardiac threats in American culture. The mission is to evaluate, research, and treat heart disease by working with medical therapies as well as public policy. They discuss the problems of obesity in America and its consequences in terms of heart disease, as well as many other issues that affect the heart. You can find out more about FACT on their website at www.factsite.org.

To participate in the event, fill out the application form that can be found in this issue of Dan's Papers. Keep this healthy, fun, and noble event going! Join us on Saturday, May 29 at the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church at 9:30 a.m.

The Garden At Rock Cottage

by Lance Brilliantine

Mid May is the time to plant annuals – those delightful, colorful flowers that add depth and appeal to any garden! Over the years, we have tried many different annuals from marigolds, to zinnias, begonias, ageratum, salvia, and many others. We keep coming back to impatiens, because they are virtually indestructible and grow well in shady, acidic-soiled East End gardens.

Impatiens are ideal flowers for shady to partly-shady garden areas. The hybrid "New Guinea" impatiens will tolerate some sun, provided they are consistently moist – not easy to achieve on the East End!

Impatiens originated in Asia and South Africa before making their way to the United States. The name "impatiens" refers to the voracity with which the seedpods discharge seeds when ripe. The plants have thick stems and light green leaves (the hybrid New Guinea Impatiens have green or bronze-toned leaves). Flowers may be in solid colors, colors with white star patterns, and bicolor variations in red, rose, orange, pink, salmon, white, or purple. Flowers may be single, double, or "Camellia" flowered.

Impatiens are the most popular annual bedding plants in the United States because of their beauty and ease (petunias are the second most popular). The plant is one of about 500 species in the family Balsaminaecae that includes the old-fashioned garden balsam. New Guinea impatiens were introduced to the United States in the mid-1970s.

Because impatiens thrive in filtered to partial shade, they must have protection from hot afternoon sun. The soft, fleshy stems wilt quickly when the plants are dry, and are highly susceptible to moisture stress. If allowed to dry out, plants will drop their leaves and flowers. So, it is important to keep the plants well-watered, but not wet, at all times. Given the water requirement, impatiens are ideal plants for borders, containers, and hanging baskets.

We have found the best soil in which to grow impatiens consists of rich, moist loam with some added peat moss and sand. By enriching the soil with compost or rotted manure, the need for fertilizer during the growing season is eliminated. The plants are, therefore, maintenance-free.

Bedding plants are available at most nurseries and garden centers. We have found that Wittendale's Florist on Newtown Lane offers one of the best selections. When purchasing plants, select those with a bushy appearance and full foliage that indicates the plants have not been stressed from drying out.

To plant impatiens, space each plant eight inches to ten inches apart. Offset individual plants to create a zigzag pattern. Keep in mind the closer the plants are spaced, the taller and leggier they will grow. Plant height, therefore, can be somewhat controlled by spacing. Planted at the spacing mentioned above, provided adequate water, and left to their own devices, the plants develop a beautiful, mounded shape without any pinching or pruning, and do not require any flower removal. Plants establish themselves quickly and, during the growing season, will be covered with continuous, fresh blossoms.

Impatiens are virtually disease-free, but can be susceptible to fungus and rot if they are over-watered. Try to water the plants by early afternoon to ensure leaves have the chance to dry out before nightfall to help avoid fungus.

Common garden impatiens do not attract pests. Deer do not seem to like them, so they are safe for gardens on forest edges. While the common garden impatiens are free of pests, spider mites, mealybugs, and aphids can attack New Guinea impatiens if given the chance. Some of the common garden remedies for these pests work well.

We cannot imagine a garden season without at least a few beds of impatiens. The vibrant colors and compact, carefree cultivation of this plant makes it ideal for weekenders on the East End. The plants never cease to gain admiring comments from guests, and receive our highest recommendation as a "must have" plant for the garden.

Good Things Come In Small Spaces

If you've lived in New York City for any length of time, you already know that managing your space wisely is a prerequisite to living there. Whether it's a walk-in closet, an alcove for a bedroom, a small kitchenette, a tiny dressing area, or a narrow hallway, New Yorkers are always finding ways to optimize their valuable space.

We all know that Eastern Long Island, like most resort areas, has a more spacious and open atmosphere. But being surrounded by some of the world's most beautiful beaches makes finding a place to live more costly. Even the tiniest cottage or room in a share is a hard thing to come by. That being the case, there are wonderful small cottages and shared weekend houses that, with a little imagination and ingenuity, can be made to feel more spacious than their square footage implies. Having brought the New York experience to this exclusive East End paradise, we are now able to make this transformation possible. Here are some suggestions for decorating your Hamptons shared house or summer rental.

Are your walls dark? We suggest you brighten them up with pastel or light colored paint, easy to find at Home Depot. Bright colors tend to give a room a feeling of more spaciousness. Now continue the light motif with your furniture. Natural pine or bamboo furniture will be sure to give a beachy feel to the room. You can even restore an old antique, which may be purchased at a local yard sale, by painting it white. After coating your furniture with Bin primer, a little white high gloss water-based enamel can be applied in just a short time. This will make your cabinet or dresser look bright and cheery. A lightly colored throw rug will add comfort to your small room.

If you need to provide your own bed, an aerobed will do the trick. It inflates by the push of a button and its low proximity to the ground makes the room seem larger. In addition it can be deflated and packed away during the day. Another alternative to the aerobed is a folding Futon which can also serve as a couch and is low to the ground as well. You can also enhance your bed with a cheerful and colorful comforter. If your windows are small, decorate them with eye-catching bright curtains or light blinds. Vertical blinds are easy to install and give the feeling of more height. A large mirror will visually open up a seemingly small area. Hanging plants and flowers can add beauty and decoration to your home. Highlight your walls with scenic photographs, paintings or posters.

If you have a summer share and only spend every other weekend in the Hamptons with roommates, you might want to consider purchasing a screen to divide your room. It can be an oriental screen that lets in plenty of light, but gives you the privacy and feeling of your own space. Decorate your bed with a brightly colored quilt or blanket and add throw pillows to lend extra charm to your room. Avoid having too much in your room. A cluttered feeling takes away from your space.

For those Hamptonites returning to the city during the week, you can keep your summer weekend going by decorating your small studio apartment with some of the same beachy ideas using light colors, light woods, mirrors, colorful window shades and plants indigenous to Long Island, such as ornamental grasses and flowers. Be sure to bring home some of your favorite foods from the Hamptons, to remind you of your wonderful weekends at the beach.

And if you have a particularly small bedroom like I do (just big enough for a full size bed), the lighter the walls, the bedspread, and the rug, the bigger and brighter it looks. Add a few posters reminding you of the East End and you can almost feel that summer breeze off the ocean as you settle in for the night. Whether you're in New York City or the Hamptons, the beach seems only a stone's throw away.

Gearing Up To Go Cruising

Like most Northerners, I rejoice when the weather begins to get warm and the grays and browns of winter give way to the brilliant greens and yellows and reds of spring. Tulips and daffodils break through the earth announcing, among other things, it is summer time! I gratefully bid goodbye to those few pounds taking up residence (but paying no rent) around my hips and those extra blankets, heavy-duty fleeces, and partner-less gloves scattered on my car's back seat should I ever end up in a "no cell" zone in a snow bank. Not to mention, in the trunk, the "rust-inducing-melt-anything" bag of salt and the 25-pound bag of kitty litter I once overheard someone say is good for traction.

Not counting the snow daze and below-zero temperatures, it was a fairly uneventful four-wheel drive winter. Now with mercury on the rise and the days getting ever longer, it's the perfect time to shelve the remnants of cold weather in favor of those items that say s-u-m-m-e-r loud and clear. So after a bit of spring cleaning, closet rearranging and stuffing winter coats, scarves, hats and blankets to the nether reaches, I tackle the car with vigor.

For most people, summer is about getting up and going somewhere – whether to hang out, commune with nature or window shop. Perhaps it's driving for endless stretches, discovering forgotten hide-a-ways or looking for "new" roads to get one over on summertime traffic (speaking of which, also means spending more minutes, even hours, in the car).

To make sure your time spent cruising is as comfortable as milling around the house, here are a few tips for summerizing your four-wheeled home-away-from-home:

1.All Hail to the Flip-Flop. Heaven only knows what "Troy" will mean for fashion both above and below the waist, but one thing is certain, flip-flops are as essential to summer as a 3,000-mile oil change is to cars. An extra pair in the auto comes in handy for the beach or when a pedicure calls.

2.Sweet Suit. Unless you're prone to swimming fully clothed or if simmering like a human clambake is not a big-gee, it's probably a good idea to keep a bathing suit and beach towel stashed in the car. Besides, it can often spell the difference between a spontaneous trip to the beach and landing the perfect parking spot at, say Ditch Plains or not. Ditto, too for a rash guard.

3. Mother Nature's Nibblers Got To Eat, too. To make certain you're not the belle of the banquet, stock up on critter deterrent. Different recipes hinder different species. Personal favorites Cactus Juice and Tick Off, contain no harmful chemicals nor do they leave any oily residue.

4. Everything But The Kitchen Sink. Now that you've cleared the car of the he-man bag of kitty litter and gotten rid of the erstwhile sack of salt, you're bound to have plenty of room for everything but the kitchen sink (summer basking umbrella, foldable beach chair(s) and a flannel shirt or two just in case the wind kicks up). Sometimes the urge to go to the beach strikes at the most unlikely moment and rather than having to go home...and pack up, it's better to be prepared.

5.Hey There, Raccoon Eyes. Sometimes it's unavoidable. You overdo it just a bit and bingo, you're fried! Whichever way you like it. Scented or unscented. Oily foamy, lotion-y, creamy or on wipes, sunscreen is the season's most important potion. Don't be shy, go ahead and slather it on.

For the maintenance-minded, getting a car ready for summer involves a little action under the hood. The usual suspects (oil, coolant/antifreeze, transmission fluid, wiper fluid) need to be checked and as necessary changed and/or topped off. Usually a switch to heavier grade oil is recommended for warmer weather to ensure the engine is properly lubricated. It's also key to check or have checked your tire pressure as well as the various hoses and belts.

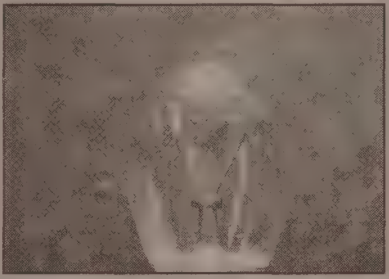
Light Up Your Life

Coming home at the end of the day frazzled and tense? Keep the light soft and low to soothe you. Need to perk up and get busy? Brighten those lights to create more energy in the room. Lighting does far more than make it possible to see inside; it influences how we view our environment.

The natural light that comes into our homes from the sun changes as the day progresses and as the seasons change. At this time of year, late spring to early summer, it's warm enough to open the windows but not so hot as to require air conditioning. The light, filtering through the emerging overhead canopy of leaves, feels soft and invites us to come outside. We emerge from our homes like the flowers breaking through the ground.



By late summer, with the sun directly overhead, the outdoor light is harsh and relentless. It isn't just the temperatures, it's also the quality of the light that keeps us under the beach umbrellas or hiding inside until the light softens in late afternoon. The softer colors of the golden hour will bring us back outside to enjoy the sunset. The darkness of a summer night feels cozy with the starry sky above. Watching the stars is soothing and romantic.

Come fall, the outdoor light is energized again. We're outside again, reveling in the bright colors. The days get shorter and we feel the need to soak up as much natural light as possible to sustain us through winter.

Winter light is best enjoyed when the body is physically active. Whether walking, skiing or shoveling snow, it takes activity to keeps us warm while we embrace that precious sunlight. We huddle inside, rushing from cars to doorways to get out of the chill that accompanies the winter light.

Inside our homes we create our own lighting environments and have more influence over our moods. The ways in which we combine ambient, task and kinetic lighting complement the interior design. Rooms with different functions require different lighting. Layers of lighting often work best. Dimmer switches help us to regulate the lighting level.

Emotionally and spiritually we need differing amounts of darkness and light in a room. The darker areas are restful. The brighter areas are inviting and stimulating. This holds true in the living room, bedroom, great room, den, dining room, kitchen, any type of room in the home.

We sleep better in a very dark room than in a bright room. We need the respite from the stimulation of the light and the world to recharge our spirits and our inner batteries. Nightlights and low lighting help us to emerge from ourselves and come into the light more gently than turning on a bright overhead.

Ambient lighting washes a room with a glow. It can be provided by recessed lighting, cable lighting, wall washers, sconces and more. It provides the backdrop for a room and can define conversational areas or provide interest and drama to a room. It can draw our eyes upward, downward or all around the room.

We need to task lighting to provide sufficient light for reading, sewing, applying makeup, cooking, etc. Not only does this lighting illuminate our work so that we can see what we're doing, it helps to keep our attention focused on the task at hand. When we need a break or a chance to reflect on what we're doing, we can look into the "distance" of the room and rest our eyes. Task lighting can be provided by table lamps, desk lamps, pendant lights and makeup lights, to name a few.

Accent and aesthetic lighting bring out the best in other features of the décor. Accent lighting highlights our paintings and artwork, while aesthetic lighting is often a work of art in itself. Neon sculptures add splashes of color and complete a design scheme. A mood light with its square panels that pulse and sweep in a variety of colors add splashes of color and mood around the room. To carry out a party theme or add a touch of whimsy to a room, there are fun and unique lamps including fish, flamingos, hot peppers, bowling pins, and eggs.

What better way to warm you inside and out than the kinetic light of a fire in the fireplace? There's nothing cozier. Gazing at the flames is mesmerizing and restful. Candlelight enhances intimacy at a dinner party or the serenity of soaking in the tub. There's a meditative feeling that comes with watching flickering candles; think of the peaceful hush of a candlelight service at church.

Not sure how to accomplish the best lighting effects in your home? Lighting design can be provided by a specialized lighting designer or as part of the interior design. Decorating magazines and websites include lighting recommendations. Visiting local lighting shops frequently provides design help. Whether on an unlimited or tight budget, paying attention to your lighting choices will enhance the livability of your home.

All-A-Flutter In The Garden

Mother Nature's most delicate creatures flit and flutter their way through our Northern spring and summer and ultimately into our hearts. Romping among wildflowers and cultivated gardens, their dazzling colors and intricate designs entertain and inspire. These characteristics provide numerous opportunities for both the gardener and aficionado to enjoy the journey of the butterfly from fuzzy caterpillar to brilliant flight, perhaps offering a way to encourage children to delight in nature.

Just like people, butterflies have preferences. What is planted will determine what species is attracted. The greater the selection and color of plants available, the wider the diversity of fluttered fancy. For gardeners, the most important stages of the butterfly lifecycle are caterpillar and winged-adult. Adult butterflies gain their nourishment from nectar-blooming plants, while their offspring nibble surrounding foliage.

The successful butterfly garden is sun-drenched and marries both nectar (to entice adults) and host plants (to feed young caterpillars). In laying out the garden remember that butterflies, like most insects, are nearsighted. Clusters of brightly toned flowers, yellows and purples particularly, will grab and hold their attention over ones planted alone. Consider, too, plantings of different heights, varieties and diverse blooming schedules to keep interest percolating in the garden throughout the spring season and eventually into fall. Since their life span is fairly short, consider planting several nectar sources to encourage more butterflies to visit.

As the female butterfly can be very picky about where she will lay her eggs, to persuade her to choose your garden as "nursery," provide a variety of host plants. The New York Botanical Garden recommends a selection of common weeds in the milkweed family to an assortment of vegetables (carrot, cabbage, broccoli), flowering trees and shrubs (lilac, cherry, dogwood) and herbs (mint, dill, parsley). The literature further notes that caterpillars of most butterflies are not considered true pests to many cultivated garden plants and since they only feed on certain plant groups, most will leave more valuable shrubs, ornamentals and perennials in peace.

Now that your yard is a bustling butterfly maternity ward, in order to keep your winged visitors coming back for more, The Butterfly Conservatory at the American Museum of Natural History suggests the following plant varieties. Each is easy to find and grows on the East End and, equally important, attractive to many butterfly species. Look for Milkweed (does double-duty as a host plant), Aster, Butterfly Bush, Purple Cornflower, Day Lilies, Hibiscus, Joe-Pye Weed, Lantana, Lavender, Phlox, Rhododendron, Salvia, Goldenrod, Ironweed, Verbena and Zinnia.

Unable to regulate their body heat, butterflies are natural sun worshipers. Basking in the sun's warm rays enables them to generate the necessary energy to fly. Assist nature by placing large flat rocks in and around the garden. This will do the trick by providing butterflies with a spot or two to soak up needed sunshine.

Butterflies don't only eat nectar; water, too, is essential to their well-being. Often spied in groups hovering above muddy water or wet sand, looking as if they are munching on dirt, they're engaged in what is termed "puddling". Butterflies do it to ingest minerals and salts found in the water. To create your own butterfly puddle, fill a typical five-gallon pail with a healthy layer of soil and topped with a gallon of sand mixed with 1/2 to 3/4 cup of rock salt. Then artfully disguise behind assorted butterfly attracting plants and remember to keep moist.

As butterflies rarely venture out during inclement weather, it's also important that your garden provide shelter from wind and, if possible, rain. Ideal for this activity are hedges, groups of shrubs or small trees. Trellises, fences or walls, draped with honeysuckle, hops, clematis are also wonderful alternatives.

These simple suggestions will have you well on your way to developing a successful habitat where butterflies feel right at home, especially as encroaching development threatens their survival. Above all, be sure to keep your use of pesticides to a minimum (or better yet not at all) and provide for all stages of their lifecycle to keep them flitting, fluttering and thriving not only in your garden but the greater environment as well.

Hampton Bays NY

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Home of late actress and drama coach Uta Hagen has just gone to contract. The Montauk home was Ms. Hagen's summer getaway and is located in the exclusive ocean beach community of Surfside in Montauk. Although the home would be considered a modest beach house by today's standards, its location brought the selling price to just under $2 million. The deal was made by a local Montauk broker.

Parcels for preservation. East Hampton Town approved the purchase of two more pieces of land last Friday. One, a .04-acre piece on Sammy's Beach Road in East Hampton for $13,500, and the other, a half acre on Edgemere Lane on Fort Pond in Montauk is valued at $290,000. The two-parcel purchase is part of East Hampton's effort to preserve and protect land near to harbors and fresh water ponds: Both pieces are located in wetland areas. The funds will be drawn from the Community Preservation Fund.

On the Market:

In Bridgehampton, the Three Ponds Farm Estate remains for sale. This property is not only the most expensive but by far the most exceptional listing on the market in the Hamptons today. The estate grounds and buildings are spread out over more than 60 acres of prime farmland and waterfront. The home was designed by Architect Allan Greenburg, who has also worked on projects such as the White House and Princeton University. The main house has 8 bedrooms and nine baths. This compound consists of a sprawling main house, 14 gardens, a 9 hole golf course, a grass tennis court and a 75-foot pool and pavilion. There is a private guest cottage on 4 acres. The three ponds, for which the property is named, are stocked with fish. There is a fish house, barns, a storage silo and pro shop. Although there has been some speculation of a sale, no deal has yet been made public. Priced at 75 million, it is listed with Allan M Schneider Associates.

Coincidentally, next door to the home of Uta Hagen, another property is for sale in Montauk's ocean beach community of Surfside. A beach house in that same neighborhood has just come on the market. It is being co-brokered with Monte & Monte in Montauk for $1,999,000.

Out on Napeague Stretch, a small shop is for sale right across from the ocean. The quaint little shop is just up the road from the Lobster Roll and directly next to The Napeague Stretch restaurant. The property includes a store and an owner's cottage with a view of the wetlands. Listed with most Montauk realtors at 1.5 million.

In Greenport the Morning Glory B & B is now for sale. The Inn is located in Main Street's historical district. The home was built in 1822 by the Corwin brothers, local whalers before the Main Street district was actually laid out. The clapboard house has been renovated and updated but is still filled with charm. Through the years the house has been passed to both the Moore and Monsell families, whose names are long familiar on the North Fork. The new owner has transformed it into a B & B by adding bathrooms and remodeling the interior. It has four bedrooms and four baths, a wrap-around porch, and abounds with perennials. Wisteria covers the pergola. The out buildings include a two car garage and storage barn. Priced at $629,000 with Prudential Douglas Elliman, Southold.

The Barcelona Inn in Sag Harbor is a 12 unit inn on 6 acres on Route 114 that has been for sale for 1.5 million dollars. The property, owned by Charlie McCarron of Sag Harbor, is causing some controversy as of late, due to a prospective buyer bringing proposed plans to the town. It seems the hopeful buyer would like to see the town purchase a public easement to the land that would allow him to buy it and operate it as affordable housing. The town has made it clear that they are not interested in the idea.

Changes:

In Sag Harbor this past week, the marquee that has hung above the cinema on Main Street for decades came down. The circa 1950s landmark sign that read "Sag Harbor" is said to be replaced with a new one of similar design. The Village Board of Historic Preservation and Architectural Review became concerned as did a local resident who hopes to see the original sign remodeled and replaced on the cinema wall. The sign is being stored in the Whaling Museum.

Police Blotter

Finger Picking Good. Kentucky Fried Chicken or as it's now known, KFC, was the target of a gun-toting thief. According to Riverhead Town Police, the robbery took place last Monday evening at the Route 58 location when an assailant entered a back door and bandied about a black revolver. Fleeing on foot, the suspect made off with nearly $200 in cash. The case is still under investigation and the detective division has asked anyone with leads to call 631-727-4500.

Designer Duds Disappear. The Tanger Outlet Center in Riverhead was the backdrop to a jeans heist. An estimated $500 worth of DKNY merchandise (eight pairs of jeans and three jackets) went missing, according to police reports.

Dude Where's My Hyundai? An East Hampton woman loaned her car to a friend to go to the deli. After several hours, where neither friend nor car returned, the woman called authorities. East Hampton police reports indicate the "car thief" turned himself in without incident the following afternoon.

Corrections Officer Sent to Pen (and we're not talking her memoirs). A 16-year Suffolk County Jail corrections officer lost her freedom after a year long investigation revealed her to be a drug dealer. Charged with criminal sale of a controlled substance in the third degree, she was sentenced to three years in stripes after being caught on video selling $300 worth of crack.

Knife-Wielding Mama Slices and Dices Her Way to An Arrest. A Riverside woman was charged with second degree menacing after allegedly threatening an unnamed party with a kitchen knife over $20. In other knife news, a Riverhead man was reportedly threatened at knifepoint and robbed of $50.

Head Banger's Ball Breaks Out in Taxi. An argument erupted in a Hampton Town taxi over a fare, according to police. Though the driver suffered a blow to the head, he was not injured. The same, however, cannot be said for his cab, which sustained a busted taillight after the assailant exited the vehicle.

Sticks and Stones Will Break Bones. According to police reports, an argument in Riverside between two women left one with a broken jaw. The victim, who was treated at Central Suffolk Hospital, told police she threw a rock at the woman because she believed the woman was about to throw one at her. Before the victim realized it, the attacker with two friends in pursuit caught her; then proceeded to punch her in the face.

New Jack City? An attempted "bike jack" occurred on West Main in Riverhead when a Flanders man armed with what looked like a pistol demanded a bicycle and cash from a Riverhead man. Unable to score anything the suspect left the scene of the crime on foot, but was arrested shortly thereafter and charged with attempted robbery in the first degree. According to police reports, the alleged gun turned out to be an air pistol.

Southampton Drug Enforcement Hits Druggie Lotto. According to Southampton Police, five people were arrested in a drug bust. Officers observed the "fabulous five" near the Riverside traffic circle in two parked cars conducting what appeared to be a drug deal. The driver of one of the cars sold Angel Dust (aka PCP) to the three individuals in the second car. After a PCP puff feast, the buyers were later charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh-degree, police said. The dealer was apprehended and charged at the scene with criminal sale and possession of a controlled substance in the fifth- and seventh-degree. A passenger in the mobile drug emporium was also arrested on drug-related charges. And after a brief squabble with police over her handbag, which contained PCP and, quantity of marijuana, she was additionally charged with unlawful possession of marijuana and for obstructing governmental administration.

Ride and Dash. First there was "dine and dash," now it appears "ride and dash" is poised for a comeback. According to reports filed by the East Hampton Town Police Department, a 16-18 year-old hailed a taxi from the Speonk train station and directed a JR's Taxi cab driver to take him to Whalebone Village in East Hampton for an agreed fare of $75.00. Upon arrival at the destination the youth gave the driver $10.00 and bolted from the cab.

FULL METAL JACKET

Dear Dan,

In 1969, like many others, I returned home from a year of 24/7, non-stop, gun barrel to gun barrel combat, only to realize that the enemy's deadliest weapon had, all along, been firing at my back.

A continual, blaring barrage of shameless distortions by a media bent on its own selfish business and political agenda had enriched and hardened the will of the enemy's leadership; people who had and were to torture and summarily mass murder hundreds of thousands of their own, similar to the likes of a Saddam Hussein regime.

One still can see these people smiling and smirking but it was not a laughing matter to those of us who had been sent to fight in the trenches.

The point is, if we believe that the ideas and concepts in the Preamble to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights apply only to us in the United States, then let us put up the barriers, pull all our troops home, plant the victory gardens, hunker down and get ready to do with a lot less. But if we know that these concepts are not ours alone, then let us, collectively, get off the couch and back our people in the field to the degree that no one anywhere, misinterprets our resolve.

To do anything less is deeply disgraceful and ultimately murderous, as I have witnessed.

One generation shot in the back ought to be enough, don't you think?

NO, THANK YOU

Dear Dan,

Once again, I thank you wholeheartedly for using one of my paintings for the cover of Dan's Papers.

It is an honor and a privilege. I think it looks quite splendid.

Thank you. Thank you.

Dinah Maxwell Smith

NUMERO UNO

Dear Dan,

"Truth is stranger than fiction". I was so entranced by your story, Killer Laptop, that I gave it to my twenty-three year old daughter and her boyfriend to read. When they showed no interest, I cornered them while they swam in my pool, and read it to them. They, too, were captivated.

Your staff was gracious enough to provide me with the August15, copy when I stopped by several weeks ago. Please thank the young man that was so gracious as to seek, find, and help me scour many issues to find the "Killer Laptop" article. Further, your follow-up on the Ammon murder with an article about Danny Pelosi and his pugilist endeavors in Hawaii was disclosed over one week after your article was published on the network news - you scooped the networks! Then, your April 9th edition (I'm glad I was sitting down), "My Screenplay", was pretty much what I had been thinking since your August 2003 article...."Truth is stranger than fiction".

This truly horrible Ammon story, both of Ted, Generosa, and their children, is sensational on its on merits and there is no need for embellishment by the press.... Just the facts, as you wrote in The Killer Laptop. Please do not for one silly second think that I read Dan's Papers solely for this moribund interest. I truly enjoy your articles of fantasy and am enamoured of your writing creativity. The Ecuadorian Eel series, Sag Harbor's version of Seinfeld's Soup Nazi "no seats for you", St. Andrew's Church falling into the sea (Dan's Papers helped to save it!), and many more articles you have written over the six years I've been reading Dan's Papers have kept me hooked on you.

Enough about you, Dan...I can't miss The Sheltered Islander column by Sally Flynn (no, I'm not a relative or friend!). Her column always evokes a laugh (or more) out loud from me.

BAD DOG

Dear Dan,

Is there a beach in the Hamptons where someone can take his or her dog during the summer (during the daytime hours)?

Loni Frazita
Via e-mail

I think Southampton and East Hampton have different laws. Dogs are more ornery in one than the other, apparently.–D.R.

RED HEADED STRANGER

Dear Dan,

I see in the latest issue of the paper that Star Boggs is catering the Willie Nelson concert this summer. Did I miss something – does Starr have a new restaurant location?

B. Greenberg
Via e-mail

Willie is having wrist surgery and had to cancel. I'm told Starr is going to open a new restaurant this summer in Westhampton Beach where the Westhampton Grill had been.–D.R.

APOLOGIA

Dear Dan,

Your article, Sorry, in which you apologize on behalf of "everyone who can't live up to President Bush's standards" raises a relevant question: Who will apologize on your behalf?

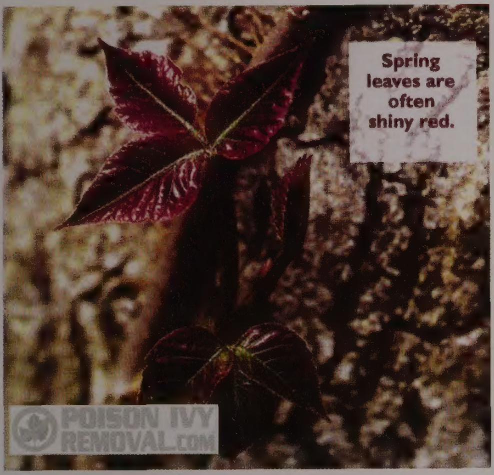
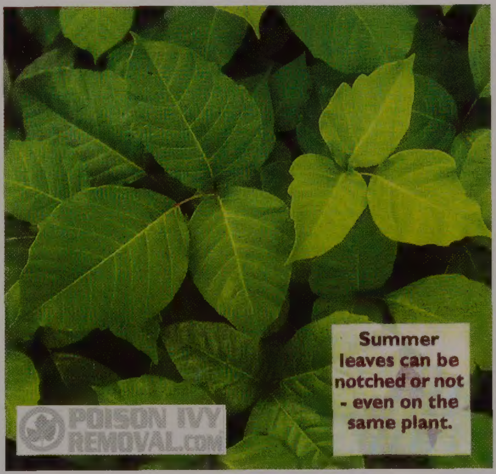
POISON IVY REMOVAL.COM®

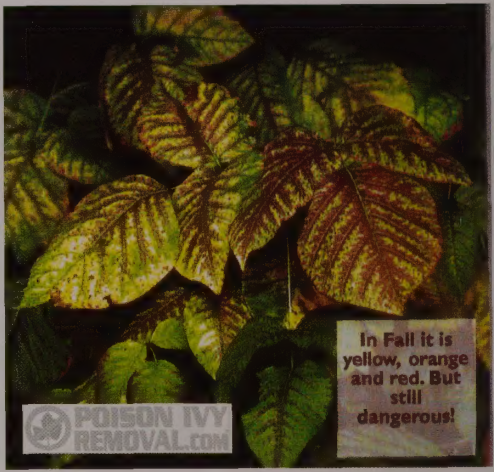
We're Just "Itching" To Get Rid Of Your Poison Ivy.



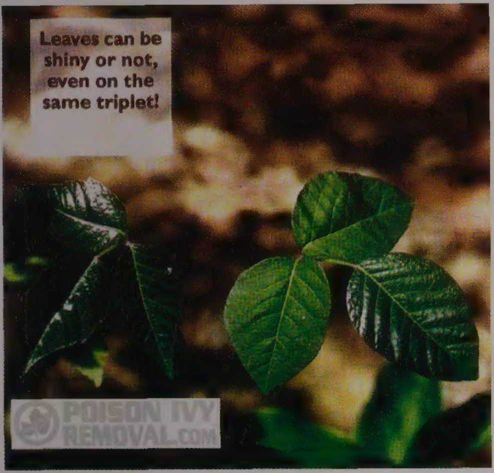
Spring leaves are often shiny red.



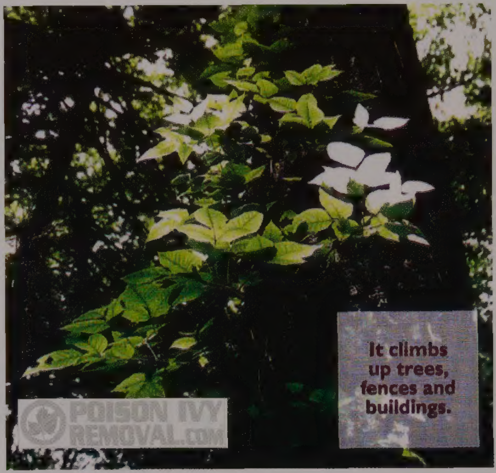
Summer leaves can be notched or not - even on the same plant.



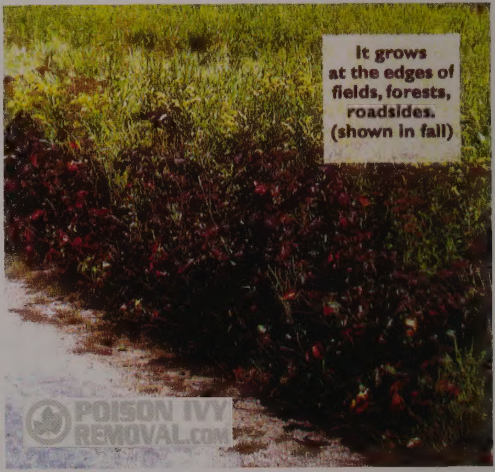
In Fall it is yellow, orange and red. But still dangerous!



Leaves can be shiny or not, even on the same triplet!



It climbs up trees, fences and buildings.



It grows at the edges of fields, forests, roadsides. (shown in fall)

1. WHAT CAN I DO TO RELIEVE THE ITCH?

There is no cure for the rash once it begins., only relief of the symptoms. Avoid further contact with the plant oils if possible. Once contact is made with the oil, immediately flush exposed parts with cold water and soap. Seek medical attention if rash persists more than 3 days.

2. DO THE BLISTERS CAUSE THE RASH TO SPREAD?

No. The blister are the body's natural allergic reaction to poisonous plants. IF the blisters break and ooze, the fluid does not contain the oils that cause spreading. Oils front the original contact with the plant will continue spreading (unless removed) for the first 1 or 2 days. If new areas of rash appear after 3 days, you are getting re-exposed to the plant oils, most likely from contaminated clothing, tools, or even cat or dog.

3. CAN I GET THE RASH FROM SOMEONE ELSE?

Generally speaking, no. Once the rash appears (i.e., within 1-3 days), the original oil has all bonded the the victim's skin, so it can't spread to others.

4. HOW LONG DO THE URUSHIOL OILS LAST?

OILS DO NOT EVAPORATE and can remain active for a year or longer after being picked up on tools, clothing, animal fur, etc.

5. I'VE NEVER GOTTEN THE RASH BEFORE. CAN I GET IT NOW?

Yes, you can begin getting the rash at any time during your life. Three out of four people are sensitive to poison oak and ivy. Sensitivity is just a matter of being exposed enough times until the body becomes allergic to the poison oils.

6.SHOULD I WRAP OR COVER THE RASH WITH BANDAGES?

Air is helpful to healing an wound. If you cover the rash with a sterile bandage, cover loosely to allow healing oxygen to reach the surface of the skin. It is important to keep the rash very clean; changing the sterile bandage frequently reduces the risk of infection. Seek medical attention if rash becomes red, feverish, or shows other signs of infection.

7. ARE DEAD PLANTS SAFE TO TOUCH?

No. The poison oils remain toxic and do not evaporate. All parts of the living or dead poison plant, including the roots, contain the urushiol oils. Be specially careful of dead vines on firewood and leafless vines in the winter.

8. DO I NEED TO CLEAN URUSHIOL OIL FROM CLOTHING AND TOOLS?

Yes. The poison oil will remain active on these articles and can case a rash months, or even years, later. Removal of the oil with a thorough cleansing is important to avoid contaminating unsuspecting victims in the future.

9. CAN I GET THE RASH FROM MY PETS?

Yes. Since the animals' fur protects their skin from the poison oil, they won't get a rash. However, the oil will remain on their fur and will contaminate you when you touch them. Removal of the poison oil from your pet with an effective cleanser will help avoid contaminating you and your family with an unwanted and unexpected rash.
